PRINTED IN THE UK

Music, Sound, and the Moving Image is the first international scholarly journal devoted to the study of the interaction between music and sound with the entirety of moving image media – film, television, music video, advertising, computer games, mixed-media installation, digital art, VJ-ing, et alia. The journal is intended to be truly interdisciplinary, inviting contributions from across a range of critical methodologies, to include musicology and music analysis, film studies, popular music studies, cultural theory, aesthetics, sociology, marketing, sound studies, and music psychology.

It is published twice a year, and articles (5,000–10,000 words) are invited on a continuous basis for editorial consideration and peer review. Style guidelines are available from the editorial address, or at www.msmi.org.uk, or at www.liverpooluniversitypress.co.uk.

MSMI is also committed to publishing English translations of important articles from other languages. Proposals for translations are welcome and should include the name of the proposed translator and the willingness to seek permission – we are also interested in receiving recommendations of works that should be translated.
