

PROJECT MUSE®

Contributors

ESQ: A Journal of the American Renaissance, Volume 53, Number 1, 2007 (Nos. 206 O.S.), pp. 112-113 (Article)

Published by Washington State University

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1353/esq.2007.0002>

➔ For additional information about this article

<https://muse.jhu.edu/article/223483>

Contributors

JOSEPH ALKANA . . .

is Associate Professor at the University of Miami, where he teaches American literature before 1900. Professor Alkana is author of The Social Self: Hawthorne, Howells, William James, and Nineteenth-Century Psychology (1997) and a number of articles on American literature, as well as coeditor of Cohesion and Dissent in America (1994). He is presently at work on a project that deals with lineage and cultural transformation in contemporary American Jewish literature.

JAMES HEWITSON . . .

teaches in the Department of English at the University of Tennessee—Knoxville. He completed his PhD at the University of Toronto and is finishing “Dark Postmillennialism,” a book-length examination of millennial and apocalyptic themes in eighteenth- and nineteenth-century American literature.

ANDREW LOMAN . . .

Assistant Professor of English at Memorial University of Newfoundland, is currently writing a book on film adaptations of nineteenth-century American literature and developing a documentary about the Dutch East Indies during World War II. His articles and fiction have appeared in the Journal of American Studies and Exile: The Literary Quarterly.

MICHAEL PRINGLE . . .

teaches early American literature at Gonzaga University. He received his PhD from Washington State University and continues to explore the influences of Thoreau on Hawthorne, and vice versa.