PROJECT MUSE®

Contributors

Hastings Center Report, Volume 40, Number 1, January-February 2010,
p. 48 (Article)

Published by The Hastings Center

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1353/hcr.0.0221>

➔ For additional information about this article

<https://muse.jhu.edu/article/370363>

Contributors

Herbert J. Bonifacio is an adolescent medicine fellow at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, Ontario. He is completing his Masters of Science in Bioethics at McGill University.

Shawneequa L. Callier is a postdoctoral fellow at the Center for Genetic Research Ethics and Law in the Bioethics Department at Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine.

Christine Grady is deputy and acting chief of the Department of Bioethics at the Clinical Center, National Institutes of Health. She also heads the section on human subjects research.

Michael L. Gross is professor of political science and chair of the Division of International Relations at the University of Haifa, Israel. He wrote Moral Dilemmas of Modern War: Torture, Assassination and Blackmail in an Age of Asymmetric Conflict (Cambridge, 2010).

Ann B. Hamric is a professor in the School of Nursing and a faculty affiliate in the Center for Biomedical Ethics and Humanities at the University of Virginia. She directs the Moral Distress Consultation Service at the UVA Medical Center.

John Huss is assistant professor of philosophy at The University of Akron. His research interests include philosophy of science, genetic research ethics, and environmental ethics.

Annie Janvier is associate professor of pediatrics at the University of Montreal and a pediatrician and clinical ethicist at Sainte Justine Hospital in Quebec.

Eric T. Juengst is professor of bioethics at the Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine's Department of Bioethics, and director of the Center for Genetic Research Ethics and Law.

John D. Lantos is director of the Children's Mercy Hospital Bioethics Center in Kansas City and visiting professor of neonatology at The University of Chicago. He is the author of Do We Still Need Doctors? (Routledge, 1999).

Stephen Latham is deputy director of the Interdisciplinary Center for Bioethics at Yale University.

Hilde Lindemann is professor of philosophy at Michigan State University. A fellow of The Hastings Center, she recently coedited Naturalized Bioethics: Toward Responsible Knowing and Practice, (Cambridge, 2008).

Joseph Millum holds a joint appointment with the Clinical Center Department of Bioethics and the Fogarty International Center at the National Institutes of Health.

Julie Rothstein Rosenbaum is a primary care physician and assistant professor at Yale University School of Medicine. She is a coeditor of the Yale Office-Based Medicine Curriculum.

Carl E. Schneider is Chauncey Stillman Professor of Law and Professor of Internal Medicine at the University of Michigan and coauthor of a casebook on the law of bioethics, which is now in its second edition.

Ilina Singh is Wellcome Trust University Lecturer in Bioethics and Society at the BIOS Centre, London School of Economics and Political Science. She is working on a book on a Wellcome Trust-funded research project called VOICES: Voices on Identity, Childhood, Ethics, and Stimulants (www.addingvoices.com).

Connie M. Ulrich is associate professor of bioethics and nursing in the University of Pennsylvania School of Nursing and member of the Biobehavioral and Health Sciences Division and New Courtland Center for Transitions and Health.

Submission Guidelines

The Hastings Center Report welcomes manuscript submissions. Prospective contributions may take many forms: articles that explore philosophical and ethical issues in medicine, health care, technology, medical research, the use of human subjects, and the environment; reports or reviews of empirical studies that implicate relevant philosophical and ethical questions; short, provocative essays; case studies (which may be accompanied by commentary on the case); personal narratives about receiving or providing health care; and brief commentary on relevant events in the news.

Most articles and empirical reviews accepted for publication are no longer than 6,000 words, and short essays no longer than 2,400 words. Shorter work is encouraged. For case studies, descriptions should be about 400 words, and commentaries should be no more than 650 words. Brief commentary should be no more than 800 words.

All feature articles, all reports and reviews of empirical work, and many short essays are reviewed blind. Authors' names and identifying information should appear only on a separate cover page. In matters of grammar and usage, the Report refers to the Chicago Manual of Style, although for purposes of review, submissions need not conform to Chicago. Authors' instructions for formatting endnotes are available at www.thehastingscenter.org.

The Report requires authors to disclose all financial relationships that might have biased their judgment, including:

- sources of funding for the item submitted; and
- financial or other significant relationships (including, for example, consulting, speakers' fees, membership on corporate advisory committees, and expert legal testimony) of the author and the author's immediate family in the last five years with companies, trade associations, unions, litigants, or groups that may gain or lose financially from the conclusions the author presents.

Please complete a Conflict of Interest form for each author when submitting. This form is available at www.thehastingscenter.org.

To facilitate review, please submit electronic copies in *.rtf format to editorial@thehastingscenter.org.