PROJECT MUSE®

Contributors

Cultural Critique, Number 74, Winter 2010, pp. 221-223 (Article)

Published by University of Minnesota Press

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1353/cul.0.0072>

➔ For additional information about this article

<https://muse.jhu.edu/article/374650>

CONTRIBUTORS

Basil Dufallo is assistant professor of classics and comparative literature at the University of Michigan. He is author of The Ghosts of the Past: Latin Literature, the Dead, and Rome's Transition to a Principate and articles on Latin literature and Roman culture. He is also coeditor, with Peggy McCracken, of Dead Lovers: Erotic Bonds and the Study of Premodern Europe. He is currently at work on a book on ekphrasis in Latin literature.

Katherine Harloe is a lecturer in classics at the University of Reading, UK, where she mainly teaches Greek literature. She has published several articles on eighteenth- and nineteenth-century German intellectual history. She is coeditor (with Neville Morley) of the collection Thucydides: Reception, Reinterpretation, Influence, and is currently completing a book on methodological debates in the history of classical scholarship.

Duncan Kennedy is professor of Latin literature and the theory of criticism at the University of Bristol. He is the author of The Arts of Love, on critical approaches to Roman love elegy, and Rethinking Reality, an exploration of the epistemology of science through Lucretius's poem "On the Nature of Things."

Vassilis Lambropoulos is C. P. Cavafy Professor of Modern Greek in the Departments of Classical Studies and Comparative Literature at the University of Michigan. He is author of Literature as National Institution, The Rise of Eurocentrism, and The Tragic Idea. He is working on a study of hubris in modern drama.

Miriam Leonard is lecturer in Greek literature and its reception at University College London. She is author of Athens in Paris: Ancient Greece and the Political in Post-War France and How to Read Ancient Philosophy, and coeditor of Laughing with Medusa: Classical Myth and Feminist Thought.

Pantelis Michelakis is senior lecturer in classics at the Department of Classics and Ancient History, University of Bristol. He is the author of Achilles in Greek Tragedy and A Companion to Euripides' Iphigenia at Aulis, and coeditor of Homer, Tragedy, and Beyond: Essays in Honour of P. E. Easterling and Agamemnon in Performance, 456 BC–AD 2003.

Ellen O'Gorman is senior lecturer in classics at the University of Bristol. She is the author of Irony and Misreading in the Annals of Tacitus and of numerous articles on historiography, Latin literature, and critical theory. She is currently working on a book about Roman fantasies of Carthage.

James I. Porter teaches classics and comparative literature at the University of California, Irvine. He is author of two books on Nietzsche and a forthcoming study on ancient Greek aesthetic theory. His current projects include a book entitled "Homer: The Very Idea" and a collection of Erich Auerbach's essays in translation.

Yopie Prins teaches English and comparative literature at the University of Michigan, where she is a founding member of Contexts for Classics. Specializing in Victorian literature and classical reception studies, she is the author of Victorian Sappho and a forthcoming book entitled Ladies' Greek.

Vivasvan Soni is assistant professor in the Department of English at Northwestern University and the author of Mourning Happiness: Narrative and the Politics of Modernity. The book traces the narrative processes by which a politics of happiness is eclipsed in the eighteenth century, and uses Greek ideas of happiness to theorize a utopian politics.

Silke-Maria Weineck teaches German and comparative literature at the University of Michigan. She has published essays on Plato, Hölderlin, Shelley, Kleist, Nietzsche, Freud, and Celan, and is currently finishing a book manuscript on the long history of paternal tropes. She thinks of herself as a metaphorologist.

Ika Willis is the Lecturer in Reception at the University of Bristol. She has published in the fields of Latin literature, Classical reception, popular culture, and critical theory. She is currently completing a book entitled Now and Rome for Continuum.

Elizabeth Wingrove is associate professor of political science and women's studies at the University of Michigan. She is the author of Rousseau's Republican Romance and various articles on feminist and social theory. She is currently completing a manuscript on the production of political "voice" in eighteenth-century epistolary culture.