

PROJECT MUSE®

Contributors

Soundings: An Interdisciplinary Journal, Volume 95, Number 1, 2012, pp. 1-2 (Article)

Published by Penn State University Press

➔ For additional information about this article
<https://muse.jhu.edu/article/467441>

contributors

Zachary Braiterman is Associate Professor of Religion in the Department of Religion at Syracuse University, where he works in modern Jewish thought and culture. He is the author of The Shape of Revelation: Aesthetics and Modern Jewish Thought, a book on Buber, Rosenzweig, and German Expressionism. His research and teaching interests reflect upon the impact of modernity and postmodernity on the “art” of religion, namely philosophical and theological expression, ritual practice, text interpretation, and community life. His department web page is at <http://religion.syr.edu>.

Graham Culbertson, a Ph.D. candidate in English at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, studies nineteenth- and twentieth-century American literature and film. His dissertation, which he plans to defend in May 2012, examines realist and naturalist narratives of the American city in juxtaposition with the urban narratives found in the contemporaneously emerging disciplines of urban planning, sociology, and reform journalism. He can be reached at graham@unc.edu.

Marc H. Ellis is University Professor of Jewish Studies, Professor of History, and Director of Jewish Studies at Baylor University. He is the author and editor of more than twenty books, most recently Encountering the Jewish Future: With Wiesel, Buber, Heschel, Arendt and Levinas.

Martin Kavka is Associate Professor in the Department of Religion at Florida State University, where he spends his time teaching and researching in the areas of Jewish philosophy, Jewish ethics, and modern and postmodern philosophy of religion. He can be contacted at mkavka@fsu.edu.

Mark D. King is a recent Ph.D. (Indiana University, Religious Studies) whose research interests include just war theory, role morality, the foundations of ethical theory and action, and the relationship between identity, alterity, and conceptions of justice. His essay draws from his dissertation, Moral Violence: Levinas and the Limits of Role Morality, which he defended in 2006. He can be contacted at kingmarkd@gmail.com.

Richard L. Rubenstein, theologian and historian of religion, is President Emeritus and Distinguished Professor of Religion at the University of Bridgeport. He is also Lawton Distinguished Professor of Religion Emeritus at Florida State University, where he served for twenty-five years. His book, After Auschwitz (1966), was one of the earliest on the meaning of the Holocaust in religious thought, both Jewish and Christian. Since 1991 his writings have very largely dealt with radical Islam. His latest book is Jihad and Genocide (2010).

Louis A. Ruprecht Jr. is the inaugural holder of the William M. Suttles Chair in Religious Studies at Georgia State University. His last two books focused directly on certain problematic biblical themes: God Gardened East: A Gardener's Meditation on the Dynamics of Genesis This Tragic Gospel: How John Corrupted the Heart of Christianity. His latest book, Winckelmann and the Vatican's First Profane Museum, was released in October 2011 by Palgrave Macmillan.