Notes on Contributors

JOSEPH DEFALCO LAMPEREZ is a graduate student at the University of Rochester completing a dissertation entitled “The Idol and the Machine: Hinduism and Technology in the Romantic Imagination.” This project shows that the Industrial Revolution was imagined through descriptions of Hinduism, a metaphor allowing writers to envision a world order reliant on new technologies and pagan social forms. His work has appeared in Mosaic: An Interdisciplinary Critical Journal and is forthcoming in Romanticism on the Net.

DANIEL E. WHITE is Professor of English at the University of Toronto. He is author of Early Romanticism and Religious Dissent (Cambridge UP, 2006) and From Little London to Little Bengal: Religion, Print, and Modernity in Early British India, 1793–1835 (Johns Hopkins UP, 2013), and co-editor of Robert Southey: Later Poetical Works, 1811–1838 (Pickering & Chatto, 2012).

MARK PARKER is the author of Literary Magazines and British Romanticism (Cambridge UP, 2001) and more recently, with Deborah Parker, of Sucking Up: A Brief Consideration of Sycophancy (U of Virginia P, 2017). He teaches at James Madison University.

JULIA M. WRIGHT is Professor of English and University Research Professor at Dalhousie University. She is the author of four monographs, including Ireland, India, and Nationalism in Nineteenth-Century Literature (Cambridge UP, 2007), and Representing the National Landscape in Irish Romanticism (Syracuse UP, 2014). She is the editor of the two-volume Companion to Irish Literature and Irish Literature, 1750–1900: An Anthology (both Wiley-Blackwell) as well as two of Lady Morgan’s novels for Broadview. She has also co-edited six essay collections. Her most recent monograph is Men with Stakes: Masculinity and the Gothic in US Television (Manchester UP, 2016).

JASPREET S. TAMBAR is an Adjunct Professor of English at the Royal Military College of Canada, where he teaches Theory and Rhetoric. He previously taught Romanticism and Shakespeare at Queen’s University, was an assistant curator of European art at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre, and a reporter with the Toronto Star. Some of his other recent work is forthcoming in Studies in Philol- ogy. He is currently completing a monograph on Romanticism and the Quarrel between Ancients and Moderns.

JONATHAN SACHS is Professor of English at Concordia University, Montreal. He is the author, most recently, of The Poetics of Decline in British Romanticism (Cambridge UP, 2018), and the Principal Investigator of the Montreal-based Interacting with Print Research Group. As a member of the group's "Multigraph Collective," he is a co-author of Interacting with Print: Elements of Reading in the Era of Print Saturation (U of Chicago P, 2018). Sachs has held fellowships at the National Humanities Center (2014–15) and the Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton, NJ (2017–18).

SHARON RUSTON is Chair in Romanticism at Lancaster University. She has published Shelley and Vitality (2005), Romanticism: An Introduction (2007), Literature and Science (2010), and Creating Romanticism (2013). She is currently co-editing The Collected Letters of Sir Humphry Davy with Tim Fulford for Oxford UP.

CHRIS WASHINGTON is an Assistant Professor at Francis Marion University. With Anne C. McCarthy, he is the co-editor of the collection Romanticism and Speculative Realism, which is forthcoming from Bloomsbury. He has published essays in Essays in Romanticism, Romantic Circles Pedagogies Commons, European Romantic Review, and Literature Compass.

ANN WIERDA ROWLAND is an Associate Professor of English at the University of Kansas. She is the co-editor with Paul Westover of Transatlantic Literature and Author Love in the Nineteenth Century, and the author of Romanticism and Childhood: the Infantilization of British Literary Culture, as well as articles on John Keats, Walter Scott, William Wordsworth, and Romantic children's literature.

AMY L. GATES is Assistant Professor in the Department of English and Philosophy at Missouri Southern State University where she teaches courses in British Romantic and Victorian literature as well as courses in literary theory, world literature, and composition. She is editing Mary Russell Mitford's Inez de Castro for the Digital Mitford: The Mary Russell Mitford Archive. Her work has been published in Women's Writing and the Keats-Shelley Journal.
