

PROJECT MUSE®

Contributors

Journal of Asian American Studies, Volume 23, Number 1, February 2020, pp. 159-160 (Article)

Published by Johns Hopkins University Press

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1353/jaas.2020.0005>

➔ For additional information about this article

<https://muse.jhu.edu/article/749530>

CONTRIBUTORS

Kodai Abe is a doctoral student in comparative literature at Binghamton University (SUNY). His dissertation will be about Asia-Pacific War narratives produced after the end of the Cold War. His article has appeared in Studies in English Literature, published by the English Literary Society of Japan.

Jason G. Coe, PhD, is Assistant Professor of comparative literature at the University of Hong Kong. He has written for the Center for Asian American Media (CAAM), Asian Cinema, Journal of Chinese Cinemas, American Journal of Chinese Studies, Hyphen, Asian Week, World Journal, and Cha: An Asian Literary Journal. He is currently soliciting academic publishers for his book manuscript, "Cinemas of Passing: Resignifying Culture across the Pacific."

Dorothy Fujita-Rony is Associate Professor in the Department of Asian American Studies at University of California, Irvine. She has worked with different public history organizations since the late 1980s, including the Museum of Chinese in the Americas, the Filipino American National Historical Society, and the Southeast Asian Archive at University of California, Irvine. She presently is completing a book project, The Memorykeepers: Gendered Knowledges, Empires, and Indonesian American History.

Tena L. Helton is Associate Professor of English at the University of Illinois Springfield. Her primary expertise is in nineteenth-century literature and culture. A specialist in early American literature and culture, she has published articles on African American, Native American, and Asian American history, literature, and film in various academic journals.

Erica Kanesaka Kalnay is a PhD candidate in English literary studies at the University of Wisconsin–Madison. She is working on a dissertation that traces the transnational circulation of racial affects across Japan, England, and America through children’s books and toys. Her research has appeared in Children’s Literature Association Quarterly and Oxford Literary Review and received awards from the Association for Asian American Studies and North American Victorian Studies Association.

Yvonne Y. Kwan is Assistant Professor of Asian American studies in the Department of Sociology and Interdisciplinary Social Sciences at San Jose State University. She serves as the director of the Ethnic Studies Collaborative of College of Social Sciences and co-chair of the Asian Pacific Islander Desi/American Task Force to advocate for curricular and cocurricular support for underrepresented students.

Zelideth María Rivas is Associate Professor of Japanese at Marshall University. She is the coeditor of Imagining Asia in the Americas (2016). Her recent publications have appeared in Afro-Asian Connections in Latin America and the Caribbean and Verge: Studies in Global Asia, among others.

Dwight Tanner is a doctoral candidate and teaching fellow at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His research and writing examine contemporary American literature with a focus on multiethnic literatures, critical race theory, speculative fiction, and drama. His work has been supported by the Charlotte W. Newcombe Foundation and the American Studies Association.

Vivian Truong is a PhD candidate in the Department of American Culture at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor and visiting scholar at the Asian/Pacific/American Institute at New York University. Her current research traces the development of Asian American and multiracial movements against police violence in late twentieth-century New York. She coordinates a public history project documenting over thirty years of Asian American movement building through oral history and the archive of CAAAV Organizing Asian Communities.