

PROJECT MUSE®

Economic Women

Lana L. Dalley, Jill Rappoport

Published by The Ohio State University Press

Dalley, Lana L. and Jill Rappoport.

Economic Women: Essays on Desire and Dispossession in Nineteenth-Century British Culture.

The Ohio State University Press, 2013.

Project MUSE.muse.jhu.edu/book/27709.

➔ For additional information about this book

<https://muse.jhu.edu/book/27709>

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The scholars who contributed their work to this volume did so long before we could guarantee publication; we thank them for their enthusiasm, their generosity, and their patience. Sandy Crooms at The Ohio State University Press supported the project when it was still in its infancy, and we are very grateful to have had her encouragement throughout the process. We also thank the (then anonymous) reviewers from The Ohio State University Press, Claudia Klaver and Talia Schaffer, who offered such valuable advice at a critical stage of the work, and Michael Genovese, Sarah Hagelin, and Ellen Malenas Ledoux, whose sharp eyes and keen insights improved the volume as well.

We are grateful for support from the University of Kentucky, California State University, Fullerton, and Villanova University; research assistance from Benjamin Raymond, Afton Woodward, Lauren Bailey, and Andrea Holliger; and additional help from Cindy Brightenburg at Brigham Young University's Harold B. Lee Library and Florence Gillich at Yale University's Cushing and Whitney Medical Historical Library.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

FROM L. D.:

I'd like to thank Jill for what began as a brief chat over coffee at NAVSA but developed into a lovely friendship and a productive collaboration. My portion of this volume is dedicated to my mom, Lannette Huelson, who provided my earliest and finest lessons on what it means to be an economic woman; my three children—Elijah Grey, Finley Sofia, and Sawyer August—who fill every day (even the long ones) with laughter and with joy; and, of course, to Tristan, whose patience, generosity, and love are assets of immeasurable value.

FROM J. R.:

With many thanks to Lana for the pleasure of collaboration, and to Mike for a partnership that exceeds words, I'd like to dedicate my portion of this volume to my parents, whose lives continue to teach me about the power of gifts and the purpose of exchange—Ann L. Rappoport and Paul Rappoport—in honor of the future that they've helped to shape for my children, Isaac Edward Genovese and Max Asher Genovese.