Acknowledgments

This book would not have been possible without the input and assistance of many persons and organizations. First I would like to thank the members of my dissertation committee—Michael Geyer, Leora Auslander, and John Boyer. To Michael Geyer I owe an immense debt for his unwavering support and wise counsel throughout my time at the University of Chicago and since. I would also like to thank him for pointing me in the direction of this project when I came to him looking for a topic for a seminar paper. Out of that paper emerged this book. I also wish to thank Leora Auslander, who encouraged me to consider the gender dimensions of politics in the West German Catholic Church. To John Boyer, I express my gratitude for providing me feedback and advice throughout the writing process.

I also thank Dagmar Herzog, Till van Rahden, Mark Ruff, Christine Stansell, and Benjamin Ziemann, who all read early drafts of my proposal and provided comments that helped me fine-tune my project at an early stage.

The research behind this book could not have been completed without the generous funding of the University of Chicago, the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD), the Institute for European History in Mainz, and the Notre Dame Institute for Advanced Study. For their assistance in negotiating German Catholic archives and their constructive criticism of the project during my stay in Germany, I wish to thank Wilhelm Damberg and Thomas Schulte-Umberg. I also owe Martin Geyer a huge debt for the assistance he provided in a time of crisis during this project.

I would like to thank my friends and colleagues at the Notre Dame Institute for Advanced Study for their feedback during the revision stage. In particular, I am grateful to the following institute fellows for their encouragement and feedback: Thadious Davis, Sabine Doering, Lewis Ayers, Susannah Monta, and Margaret Abruzzo. It would not have been possible to finish this book without the technical, logistical, and moral support provided by the institute's directors and staff: Robert Sullivan, Don Stelluto, Carolyn Sherman, and Grant Osborn. I also thank Don Kommers, Mary Ellen Konieczny, and Tom Kselman of the University of Notre Dame for their insightful suggestions about how to revise the work for publication.

I wish to thank my dear friend and colleague, Inna Shtasker, who suffered through every chapter draft and served as taskmaster of the project, never allowing me to lose sight of the final goal.

And saving the best for last, I thank Loree, whose love and support provided me with the motivation to see this project through to its completion.
