Rhetoric, Inc.
Ford’s Filmmaking and the Rise of Corporatism
Timothy Johnson
240 pages | 52 b&w illus. | 6 x 9 | RSA Series in Transdisciplinary Rhetoric
Cloth and e-book editions available wherever books are sold

“This book does important work by advancing a theory of how society may be organized around terms, values, images, and ways of thinking promulgated by corporations. It makes a valuable contribution to communication and rhetorical theory, to film studies, and even to economics.”

—Barry Brummett, author of Rhetoric of Machine Aesthetics

Penn State University Press
www.psupress.org