For more than 70 years, those with an interest in the Middle East — in the United States and abroad — have joined the Middle East Institute, attracted by its aim of fostering American understanding of the region and by its objective position on the controversies of the area. In addition to a subscription to The Middle East Journal, membership entitles an individual to a number of other unique benefits. The Institute welcomes your membership application and/or contribution to further its work.

For more information, please visit www.mei.edu/membership

Cover photo:
Laborers working at a construction site on the Shaykh Jabir al-Ahmad al-Sabah causeway — one of the largest infrastructure projects to be constructed (and part of the BRI). Kuwait, February 11, 2017.

Source: Yasser Al-Zayyat/AFP via Getty Images