China Review International publishes reviews of recent scholarly literature and “state-of-the-art” articles in Chinese studies across disciplines and languages. Reviews are generally by invitation only; however, unsolicited reviews will be considered for publication based on merit. Reviews are published in English. If a contribution is written in another language, the original and an English translation are requested. Manuscripts should be submitted to the managing editor in the form of two paper copies (text double-spaced, footnotes formatted as endnotes) and one copy of the review’s computer file via e-mail attachment. Chinese should be transliterated using pinyin. You may include Chinese characters in the body of your text, if desired. Please list complete publication data on the reviewed book at the head of your review, using the journal text as style sheet.
