INTERNATIONAL EDITORIAL BOARD

NATHALIE F. ANDERSON, Swarthmore College
HOUSTON A. BAKER, JR., Vanderbilt University
MARY ANN CAWS, Graduate Center, City University of New York
HOWARD CAYGILL, Kingston University
JOE CLEARY, Yale University
MICHAEL CORNETT, Duke University
MARTHA J. CUTTER, University of Connecticut
TERENCE E. DIGGORY, Skidmore College
TERRY EAGLETON, Lancaster University
JAMES ENGELL, Harvard University
STEPHEN GREENBLATT, Harvard University
PATRICK COLM HOGAN, University of Connecticut
DAVID JOHNSON, Open University

KAREN L. KILCUP, University of North Carolina Greensboro
FRANÇOISE LIONNET, University of California, Los Angeles
ANIA LOOMBA, University of Pennsylvania
GRAHAM MacPHEE, West Chester University
JOHN MARX, University of California, Davis
CARY NELSON, University of Illinois
PETER NICHOLLS, New York University
STEPHEN REGAN, Durham University
PAUL SMITH, George Mason University
TERESA S. SOUFAS, Temple University
HORTENSE J. SPILLERS, Vanderbilt University
GAYATRI CHAKRAVORTY SPIVAK, Columbia University

EDITORIAL POLICY

College Literature: A Journal of Critical Literary Studies is dedicated to publishing original and innovative scholarly research across the various periods, intellectual fields, and geographical locations that comprise the changing discipline of Anglophone and comparative literary studies. The journal is committed to the renewal of critique as a historically determinate, self-reflexive, and socially substantive practice, which in resisting “empathy with the victor” (Benjamin) remains perpetually dissatisfied with each new consensus. We are convinced that literature remains a significant locus for such a renewal, since in seeking to establish a space “outside” normative social values, literary (and other) texts continually stage and restage the discursive, disciplinary, and institutional limits that enable such norms, and so work to reveal critique’s complicity with them. In interrogating critical practice, the journal aims to investigate its involvement in broader parameters of public debate organized by such enduring (though mutating) political demarcations as those between the private and the public, the national and the global, or indeed between the cultural and the political itself.

College Literature welcomes submissions from across the range of scholarship in literary studies. It invites studies that explore how changing structures of social experience (such as the transnational reach of culture, or the transgressive power of sexuality, or the excessive potential of the past over contemporary interpretation) call on us to rethink existing critical assumptions, conceptual terms, and historical frameworks. Alongside work that reconsiders “traditional” or “conventional” critical orthodoxies, College Literature also welcomes scholarship that questions the “new orthodoxies” that developed as radical critiques of those existing positions but that are also embedded within specific intellectual trajectories and historical configurations of experience.