

Instructions for Contributors

Dictionaries: Journal of the Dictionary Society of North America encourages submission of manuscripts for articles treating any aspect of lexicography or areas of linguistic inquiry that relate to lexicography or the study of reference works in general.

Within reason, length of manuscripts for regular articles is not a concern. Manuscripts for the sections Reference Works in Progress and Teaching Dictionaries are by invitation of the editor, but inquiries about that section are invited, as are proposals to dedicate a section or a special issue of the journal to a theme.

Manuscripts are accepted for consideration only by electronic submission in Microsoft Word; initial submissions must contain an abstract and several keywords. Article submissions that fit the journal remit are reviewed anonymously by two or more referees.

Submissions for publication should be sent to editor Lynne Murphy (m.l.murphy@sussex.ac.uk). Reviews are overseen by reviews editor Traci Nagle and are by invitation only. Suggestions that Dictionaries should review particular books, online dictionaries, or websites are welcomed; write to Paul Fallon (pfallon@umw.edu).

Manuscript submissions should follow the Dictionaries Style Sheet in formatting the manuscript and use its citation and referencing style. You can find the Style Sheet at: <https://dictionarysofthenorthamerica.com/journal/>.

Because manuscripts are distributed to referees electronically for anonymous review, all indications of authorship should be removed from the text and from other identity-tracking markers, such as Properties and Track Changes.

After review, submissions will be assigned one of three categories: accepted (with major or minor revision), revise and resubmit (a request for a complete rewrite of an otherwise promising paper, for re-review), or reject.

Authors are responsible for securing the rights for both print and electronic publication of any illustrations and other copyrighted material contained in their submission. If this obligation poses a financial or other hardship, please consult the editor. Authors of accepted papers will be required to sign a publication agreement, a copy of which is available on request.

Dictionaries is published by the Dictionary Society of North America. As well as being available by print subscription, it is part of the Project Muse electronic journal collection. We enable Green Open-Access (self-archiving), by which authors may share the final pre-publication draft of their work through their own website or their institutions' online archives with no subvention fees. Please contact the editor to discuss any other access requirements.