Phenomenology and Existentialism

Mandelbaum, Maurice, Lee, Edward N.

Published by Johns Hopkins University Press

Mandelbaum, Maurice and Edward N. Lee.
Phenomenology and Existentialism.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/72318

For content related to this chapter https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=2476308
Contents

Preface .................................................. v

Preface to the Paperback Edition ...................... vii

Essay One: Brentano on Descriptive Psychology and the Intentional
Roderick M. Chisholm .................................... 1

Essay Two: Husserl's Theory of the Intentionality of Consciousness in Historical Perspective
Aron Gurwitsch ........................................... 25

Essay Three: Notes toward an Understanding of Heidegger’s Aesthetics
E. F. Kaelin .............................................. 59

Essay Four: Poets and Thinkers: Their Kindred Roles in the Philosophy of Martin Heidegger
J. Glenn Gray ........................................... 93

Essay Five: The Existentialist Rediscovery of Hegel and Marx
George L. Kline .......................................... 113

Essay Six: Sartre as Phenomenologist and as Existentialist Psychoanalyst
James M. Edie .......................................... 139

Essay Seven: A Central Theme of Merleau-Ponty’s Philosophy
Frederick A. Olafson .................................... 179
Essay Eight: Husserl and Wittgenstein on Language
Paul Ricoeur ........................................ 207

Essay Nine: The Relevance of Phenomenological Philosophy for Psychology
Herbert Spiegelberg ................................. 219

Essay Ten: Existentialism and the Alienation of Man
Albert William Levi .................................. 243

Index ................................................ 267