INDEX

Action: in theological voluntarism, 32; existentialist concept of, 60, 100; and value 116–21; and possibility, 118, 124–25; and determinism, 147–52; and autonomy, 154–62 passim; and choice, 163–68; two components of, 173; as criterion of convictions, 176, 182–83
Akrasia: Aristotle on, 7n
Alternatives: 118–19; 146–52 passim
Anxiety: existential, 134–35; Sartre on, 155n, 161n; and freedom, 241–43
Aquinas, Thomas: as intellectualist, 9–11, 19; and Ockham, 22
Aristotle: ethical theory of, 5–8; on ontology, 81–82; on natural kinds, 87; on choice, 145; on man as social being, 207
Augustine, Saint, 9n
Authenticity: existentialist theory of, 200–8; and obligation, 217–24; Heidegger on, 216n; criticized, 247–50
Autonomy: as central theme of existentialism, xiv–xvi, 145, 153–62; in Ockham, 26; in theological voluntarism, 32; in idealism, 36–37; Kant’s theory of, 38–42, 44–47; Nietzsche’s view of, 53; not internal power of soul, 80; intellectualistic interpretation of, 140, 240–41; Sartre’s theory of, 153n, 156n, 157–60; Heidegger’s theory of, 153n; analyzed, 156–62; and consistency, 185–86; normative implications of, 200–8; and obligation, 217–24; in modern world, 238–41; criticisms of, 241–52
Bad faith: Sartre’s view of, 112n, 195–96, 246; Simone de Beauvoir on, 168n
Baudelaire, Charles, 245
Baumgarten, Alexander, 38
Beauvoir, Simone de: ethical writings, xvii; on bad faith, 168n; on moral development, 204n; on autonomy, 207–8, 237n; on good of others, 221n
Being: existentialist concept of, 79–88 passim, 96; Aristotle’s treatment of, 81; Heidegger and Sartre on, 84n; as logical operator, 91–92; experience of, 92n; and value, 133; Heidegger on founding one’s being, 172–73
Being-in-itself: and phenomenological reduction, 68–70; contrasted with world, 74–75
Bentham, Jeremy, 13–14
Brentano, Franz, 65
Brunner, Emil, 31–32
Calvin, John, 26–27
Camus, Albert, 243n
Choice: Aristotle’s account of, 8, 163; voluntaristic use of, 14–15; in Kierkegaard, 29–30; in Kant, 41–42; in Nietzsche, 52; not mental event, 60, 163–69 passim; and value, 133; and value judgments, 141–42; Heidegger and Sartre on, 145; and prediction, 150–53; of world, 151n;
and consciousness, 159n; existentialist theory of, 162–72; and moral principles, 174–87; and social codes, 198; as involving temporal stretch, 218n; limits of, 248

Concepts: of human being in existentialism, 82–104, passim

Conceptual analysis: and existentialism, 83–86; Merleau-Ponty on, 94

Conflicts of principle: 178–80

Consciousness: Husserl's theory of, 61–63; existentialist theory of, 66–72; metaphorical descriptions of, 91; perceptual, 96; nonthetic, 158–60; and choice, 159n

Cudworth, Ralph, 11–12

Dasein: Heidegger's concept of, 71, 80n, 87n, 89n, 91n, 95n, 97n, 98–102, 119, 149n, 150n, 171n, 200n

Death: Heidegger's interpretation of, 173–74; Sartre's view of, 173n

Descartes, René: as voluntarist, 26n, existentialist reaction against, 59–60; and Husserl, 62–63; conception of God, 182

Determinism: existentialist critique of, 145–53

Dilthey, Wilhelm, 100n

Dispositional properties: and value properties, 122–23; and autonomy, 159–62 passim

Dostoyevsky, Fyodor, 241–44 passim

Duns Scotus, 72n

Education: and morality, 203n

Emotivism: and existentialism, 65

Essence: real, 6–7, 42, 59; and being, 84–85, 93; and concepts, 102n

Essentialism: in existentialism, 87–88; in ethics, 204–5

Existence: Kierkegaard's conception of, 29–30; as Verstehen, 100–1

Existentialism: contemporary attitudes toward, xi–xii; as ethical theory, xi–xvi, 72–77, 107–114, 190–92, 235–52 passim; in history of philosophy, 3–4; and voluntarism, 16, 71–72; popular interest in, 16–17, 235–36; religious forms of, 32–33, 242n; and Protestantism, 36n; and Nietzsche, 54–55; not subjectivistic, 59–60; and phenomenology, 66–73; French, 46, 75n; 225; ontological terminology of, 79–80, 88–94; and science, 89, 146; and language, 93, 101–3; as voluntaristic, 107; and "open question" argument, 126–32; on value judgment as act, 140–43; as anti-metaphysical, 146–47; on autonomy, 153–62; on choice, 162–74; on moral principles, 174–87; and utilitarianism, 178n; on human conflict, 193–95; and Marxism, 225, 236; and literature, 239–40; criticisms of, 241–52

Facticity: and being-in-the-world, 99–100; in Heidegger and Sartre, 169–70

Fichte, J. G., 35

Freedom: in Kant, 39, 145; dependence of truth on, 73; in moral judgments, 140; and autonomy, 145, 155, 161–62; and prediction, 148–51

Genet, Jean, 245

God: Aquinas' conception of, 9–11; will of, 19–20; in voluntarism, 20–21; Ockham's account of, 22–26; Protestant views of, 26, 31–32; Kierkegaard's view of, 28–30; Sartre's critique of, 115, 133

Good: naturalistic analysis of, 20; and right in G. E. Moore, 127–29; interpretation of, 142–43

Hedonism, 20

Hegel, G. W. F.: treatment of autonomy, 37, 44–46; on master and slave, 194; on finite conation, 206

Heidegger, Martin: as ethicist, xiii, 75n, 109n, 111n, 200n; later writings, xvn; and Nietzsche, 37n, 71n; and Husserl, 57–58, 60–61, 66n, 71, 87n; on truth, 69n, 107n, 119; and
INDEX

Nazism, 75n; his ontology, 79, 82, 84n, 92n, 109n; on language, 89–90, 91, 92n, 101–3, 198n; on possibility, 95–100 passim; on transcendence and facticity, 99–100; on Verstehen, 100n; not speculative, 104; on value properties, 114–15, 117n, 133, 136n; on freedom, 145, 149n; on future, 150n; on choice, 151n, 163n, 165n, 180n; on autonomy, 153n; on founding one’s being, 172–74; on death, 173–74; on moral principles, 175n; on conscience, 200n; on authentic existence, 217n

Heine, Heinrich, 35

Heteronomy: in Ockham, 25–26; and legalistic morality, 32; Kant’s discussion of, 40n; existentialist analysis of, 111–12

Human being: existentialist concept of, 80, 82–88, 95–104

Human nature: Aristotelian theory of, 5–8; Kant’s view of, 42

Hume, David: and the ethic of sentiment, 13–14; on obligation, 193, 227

Husserl, Edmund: and existentialism, 57–58, 60–61, 66–72; his philosophy summarized, 61–64; and Scheler, 65; on essential intuition, 87n; on value as practical, 117

Idealism: and voluntarism, 35–37; Husserl’s, 62–63

Ideals: in Nietzsche’s ethic, 52–53; Sartre’s account of, 138

Imperatives: and value judgments, 142–43

Individualism: Nietzsche’s comments on, 54; in existentialism, 75–76, 145, 184–85, 190–91, 198–99; and moral concepts, 130–32; in Sartre’s thought, 226, 246–47

Intellectualism: in ethical theory, 4–12; 143; in modern period, 12–13, 125; and voluntarism, 14–15, 20; Kant’s critique of, 38–43; Nietzsche’s interpretation of, 39–40; in Husserl, 64; rejected by existentialists, 107–8; its plausibility, 111–12; nonmetaphysical forms of, 130–31; and value judgments, 139–40; and autonomy, 140; and obligation, 193; and static society, 237

Intentionality: in Husserl’s philosophy, 62; reinterpreted by existentialists, 68–70; and action, 167–68

Intuitionism: of Scheler and Husserl, 63–66

James, William, 48

Jaspers, Karl: his view of autonomy, xiv, xvii; and Nietzsche, 37n; and phenomenology, 61

Kafka, Franz, 240

Kant, Immanuel: as voluntarist, 16; and Nietzsche, 37, 38, 47, 51; critique of intellectualism, 38–39; theory of autonomy, 38–43, 145; on will, 39n, 40–43, 59; influence, 44–47; and existentialism, 54–55, 203, 211n; and Husserl, 61–62; Scheler’s critique of, 65; on necessary being, 134; on freedom, 146; on moral community, 211–13, 222

Kierkegaard, Søren: as voluntarist, 21, 28–30; as founder of tradition, 32, 57

Language: and Aristotle’s philosophy, 6–7; Sartre on, 90, 198n; Heidegger on, 89–90; 92n, 101–3, 198n; and existentialism, 90–91, 93, 100–3; and intellectualism, 130–32; and evaluation, 198–99; Merleau-Ponty on, 198–99

Lukacs, G., 236

Luther, Martin, 26

Marxism: and existentialism, 225, 236

Marcel, Gabriel: on autonomy, xiv, xvii; and phenomenology, 58

Merleau-Ponty, Maurice: as existentialist, xv; on social character of morality, 76; on perception, 90, 96; and ontology, 94; on freedom, 147–48; on autonomy, 158–60, 202, 244; on choice, 169, 171–72; on publicity

255
of language, 196–200; on morality, 215n; political philosophy of, 215n

Metaphors: used by existentialists, 90–91, 93

Montaigne, Michel de: 13

Moore, G. E.: as intellectualist, 12, 125; influence, 65–66; on “ought-implying” properties, 118; on value intuitions, 125; “open-question” argument, 126–30; on supervening properties, 139n

Moral community: Kant's theory of, 211–14; as actual, 214–15; and choice, 218–21; as realisandum, 222; as sovereign, 223; Sartre's theory of, 229–34

Moral principles: and choice, xv; Aristotle on, 7–8; Ockham on, 24–25; Kierkegaard on, 28–29; Kant's view of, 39–40, 54–55; Nietzsche on, 53–54; social content of, 132; and existentialism, 145, 174–87, 191; Sartre and Heidegger on, 175n; and judicial decisions, 177; “summary” view of, 178; conflicts among, 178–81; acceptance of, 176–77, 182–83; authority of, 214–15

Naturalism: theological, 19–20; and G. E. Moore, 126–30

Natural kinds, theory of: in Aristotle, 6; applied to God, 9–10; in existentialism, 87–88

Natural Law, theory of: medieval, 8–9; in Ockham, 25; and eighteenth century thought, 36

Necessity: and value judgments, 5; and value in Sartre, 134–36

Negation: Sartre's view of, 92n

Nietzsche, Friedrich: as founder of tradition, 32–33; and Kant, 37, 38, 47, 51, 54–55; and existentialism, 37, 54–55, 57, 107; and Schopenhauer 47; theory of truth, 47–49; on evaluation, 48–51; on will, 51–52, 59; on ideals, 52–53; biologist of, 56

Obligation: existentialist theory of, xv, 183–84, 189; and autonomy, 192–93; and will, 192n; Sartre's view of, 193n, 226–34; and publicity, 196; and promises, 209–10; and moral community, 211–24; as hypothetical, 217; and authenticity, 217–24; universality of, 232–34

Ockham, William of: as voluntarist, 21–26; and Protestant theology, 26–27, 31

Omnipotence: limits on, 12; not claimed by existentialists, 151, 169–70

Ontology: of existentialism, xiii, 82–94; and voluntarism, 59; as anti-psychologistic, 59–60; and Husserl, 67; pluralistic, 67–68; terminology of, 79; and freedom, 80; classical conception of, 80–81; and language, 91–92, 103; and Merleau-Ponty, 95; of human being, 95–104

"Open question" argument: in G. E. Moore, 127–30; existentialist interpretation of, 129; and moral rules, 132

Past: existentialist interpretation of, 184–85

Perception: and value, 5; Sartre and Merleau-Ponty on, 90, 96

Phenomenology: and existentialism, 58, 66–67, 147; Husserl's, 61–65

Piaget, Jean, 204n

Plato, 4–5

Pledge, Sartre's theory of, 226–30

Possibility: and transcendence, 70; and human being, 96–100; Heidegger and Sartre on, 96n; and action, 118–121, 124–25; and necessity in Sartre, 134–36; and determinism, 146–51

Practical syllogism: Aristotle's account of, 7; and moral principles, 174–86 passim

Prediction: and value judgments, 122–23; and freedom, 148–52

Prescriptivism: and existentialism, 65, 142

Price, Richard, 12

Promises: and obligation, 131, 209–11;
INDEX

Hume on, 210–11; Sartre's theory of, 226–30
Protestantism: and voluntarism, 15, 26–27; neo-orthodox, 31–32; and idealism, 35; and existentialism, 36n
Publicity: in existentialist ethical theory, 196–200
Reciprocity: denial of, 195; Hume on, 211; Kant on, 211–14; as actualized, 214–15; Sartre's account of, 227–34
Reasons: in existentialist ethical theory, xii–xiii; God's, 24; Sartre's analysis of, 164n, 167
Rousseau, Jean-Jacques, 208
Scheler, Max: and G. E. Moore, 12,

126n, 129; as anti-naturalist, 64–65; Heidegger's criticism of 114; on value as practical, 117–18; on value intuitions, 125; and Sartre, 133
Schopenhauer, Arthur: as voluntarist, 35, 37, 44; criticism of Kant, 46–47; and Nietzsche, 47
Science: and truth, 119–20; and determinism, 146, 152–53
Situation: Sartre's account of, 169n; existentialist interpretation of, 169–71; psychological aspects of, 249–50
Skepticism, ethical, 13
Socrates, 4
Spinoza, Benedict de, 146
Teleology: Aristotle's treatment of, 6–7; and voluntarism, 15; Kant on, 42
Truth: and value in Plato, 4–5; and value in Aristotle, 7; Cudworth on, 11–12; in ethic of sentiment, 13–14; Kierkegaard on, 30; Kant on, 43; Nietzsche's theory of, 47–49; and value in Husserl, 63; Heidegger on, 69n, 107n, 119; correspondence theory of, 69; dependence on freedom, 73; and value judgments, 107, 120–21; and passivity, 120, 122–23; and validity, 122; synthetic a priori, 43, 125; and action, 155–56
Transcendence: two forms of, 70, 73; and being-in-the-world, 99–100; and other persons, 194–95
Universalizability: Kant's theory of, 52, 54–55; criticized by Nietzsche, 52, 54–55; in existentialism, 175n, 181–87, passim
Value properties: Plato's theory of, 4; in Cudworth, 11–12; in ethic of sentiment, 13–14; Ockham's treatment of, 23; Nietzsche on, 49–50; Husserl's theory of, 63–64; prima facie objectivity of, 109–14; Heidegger's critique of, 114–17, 117–25 passim; Sartre's critique of, 115, 133–137; practical character of,
PRINCIPLES AND PERSONS

115–25; and naturalism, 126–32; as supervening, 139; and value judgments, 139–42; rejected, 138, 143–44

Voluntarism: and natural law theory, 9n; defined, 14–15; evolution of, 15–16; theological, 19–33; philosophical, 35–37; and Kant, 38–44; and Hegel, 44–45; and Schopenhauer, 46–47; ontological, 59, 107; and existentialism, 71–72, 107–8; and autonomy, 240–41

Will: of God, 9–11; 19–33 passim; Kant's theory of, 38–43 passim, 212; and obligation, 192–93

Wolff, C., 38

World, existentialist concept of, 68–69, 99, 74–75, 151n

258