The House of Death

Stein, Arnold

Published by Johns Hopkins University Press

Stein, Arnold.
The House of Death: Messages from the English Renaissance.

️ For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/73134

🔗 For content related to this chapter https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=2507810
Index

Page numbers in boldface type, in references to Donne’s Devotions and to his Sermons, indicate commentary as well as quotation.

Aquinas, Thomas, images and memory, 186–87
Ariès, Philippe, 16, 160, 269, 272, 284 n. 15; critique of The Hour of Our Death, 260–66
Aristotle, 7, 186–87, 279
Astrophel, contribution by “Clorinda” quoted, 137
Augustine, Saint: on “figure,” 193; images, 186; Trinity as model of human soul, 187; unique pains of death, 8
Augustus, Emperor, on euthanasia, 22
Bacon, Francis, 125, 159, 231, 259; on death of Queen Elizabeth, 21–22; on fear, 38–39; on medical skills to ease “the pains and agonies of death,” 295 n. 9
Barnes, Barnabe, 172
Beaty, Nancy Lee, The Craft of Dying, 12, 283 n. 8
Bellow, Saul, 274–75
Boethius, 226–27
Boleyn, George, 70–71
Bolton, Edmund, 172
Browne, Sir Thomas, 13; the body in Christian burial, 291 n. 3; praise of Epicurus, 293 n. 17

Calvin, John, 194
Camden, William, on death of Queen Elizabeth, 21, 22, 23
Carew, Thomas, 148, 245
Carey, John, 212, 229, 291–92 n. 2, 292 n. 5
Casuistry, 15; Jeremy Taylor and “dying well,” 265–66
Cicero, 7, 23, 226
Contemptus mundi, 128, 151–52, 227–28, 229
Cowley, Abraham, 246–47
Crashaw, Richard, 222
Daniel, Samuel, 197
Dante, 226, 293 n. 17
Death: and annihilation, 128, 132, 249–50, 293 n. 17; certainty and uncertainty, 9, 229–31, 248–49; Christian paradigm of, 7–10, 182, 184–85; and community, 61, 249–50; dance of, 11, 12; examples considered, 21–23 (Queen Elizabeth), 25–27 (Wotton), 27–29 (More), 30–35 (Raleigh), 251–52 (Donne); as “idea,” 248, 263; as otherness and figurative otherness, 128–29, 247; privileged arguments on the side of, 232, 247; Socratic model, 6, 181; Stoic emphases, 8–9, 39–40, 181–82; and witnesses, 19–20, 50, 108–9, 250. See also Dying; Fear; Montaigne
Denham, Sir John, 149, 214
Devotions, 188, 193

297
Dickinson, Emily, 271

Donne, John: on art and nature of expression, 189–95, 225–26, 291 n. 1; body of man, 183–84; his dead daughter Lucy, 182–83, 241–44; his dead wife Ann, 139–42; his poetic voice to God, 95–96, 107; personal imagination of death, 50, 164–65; and Raleigh compared, 110, 251–52; submission of will as act of will, 108–10, 252; and witnesses, 53–54, 61, 62–63, 65, 108–9, 166, 251. Poems discussed:

Drummond, William, 215

Dyer, Sir Edward, 178–79

Dying: art of, 11–13; formal design of, 20, 25–27; and preliminary judgment concerning salvation, 14, 18, 35, 182; and reasoned acceptance, 18–19, 37, 125–26, 181–82, 185

Epicurean, 181, 262

Epicurus, 293 n. 17

Fear: of death, 7–8, 37; and despair, 38; of God, 36; panic terror, 39, 42; Raleigh’s denial of, 32

Ficino, Marsilio, 188–89, 142–43, 158

Fletcher, Giles the Elder, 171–72

French, Marilyn, 5

Freud, Sigmund, 253

Gardner, Helen, 251–52, 289–90 n. 4

Habington, William, 168–70

Hanagid, Samuel, 268

Harington, John the Elder, 71

Herrick, Robert, 116–18, 196–97

Hooker, Richard, 293 n. 7

Howe, Irving, 14

Images: of death as cheerful old age, 248; of death as forsaking this world, 247; of death reflected as love, 218–23; of death reflected as sleep, 212–15; of death reflected as time, 215–18; of devotion, 193; of figurative otherness, 128; and thought, 186–89, 207
Index

John XXIII, Pope, 4
the Lady Jane Pawlet,” 24–25, 145–46; “Eupheme” (Lady Venetia Digby), 146; “On My First Daughter,” 152–53; “On My First Sonne,” 151–52; “On Sir John Roe,” 146; “On Some-thing that Sir Lucius Cary, and Sir H. Morris-on,” 146–47; “To the Memory of . . . Shakespeare,” 147–48
Joyce, James, 271–72
Kafka, Franz, 181
“The Exequy,” 138–39; “Sic Vita,” 175–78
Knox, John, 37
Lewalski, Barbara, 283 n. 12, 284 n. 14, 286 n. 5
Lopes, Carlos, 281
Luther, Martin, 38, 193, 285 n. 16
Manningham, John, diary of, 284 n. 5
Marlowe, Christopher, 197
Martz, Louis, 283 n. 12
Marvell, Andrew: poems discussed, “A Dialogue between Thyrsis and Dorinda,” 221; “An Horatian Ode,” 129–33, 135–36; “A Poem to Spenser’s “November,” 136). Poems referred to briefly: 218, 221
Mather, Increase, 37
“Memento for Mortality, A.,” 71–72
Memento mori, 9–10, 178, 220
Milton, John: “Lycidas,” 153–57; Paradise Lost, 38, 212, 250, 263;
Samson Agonistes, 38, 233–34; Sonnet 23, 158–59
Montaigne, Michel de: cultivating indifference, 126; on death, 41–47, 252–53, 265, 267; emphasis on living well, 45–47; on fear, 42–43; friendship after death, 256–57; a pleasant experience of dying, 296 n. 19; on Socrates, 45, 46, 266–67; summary remarks, 232
More, Sir Thomas, 11, 27–29, 252
Nashe, Thomas, “Adieu! farewell earth’s bliss!” 72–74
Origen, 8
Osborne, Francis, 32–33
Osler, Sir William, 296 n. 19
Otherness: of body exulted over, 166–67; of death, 128–29, 140; of death as time, 167–70; of life in one’s response to grief, 151–52; of poet as maker, 128–32, 253–55
Paracelsus, 189
Parsons, Robert, 217, 255
Paul, Saint, 36, 161
Pelikan, Jaroslav, 283 n. 3
Petrarch, 23–24, 125–26, 149–51
Pius XII, Pope, 4
Plato, 6, 281
Plotinus, 232, 292 n. 3, 293 n. 7
Proctor, Thomas, “Respect finem,” 71
Psalm 51, 99–100, 102, 110, 285 n. 3
Quarles, Francis, 171, 290 n. 4
Raleigh, Sir Walter: death and time, 216; denial of fear, 31–32; and Donne compared, 110, 251–52; preparations for death, 30–34.
his: “The Nymph’s Reply,” 197;
Index

Raleigh, Sir Walter (Cont.)
“Sought by the world,” 220;
“What else is hell, but losse of blisfull heaven?” 172–73
Ransom, John Crowe, 155
Roethke, Theodore, “The Far Field,” 275–77
Seneca, 7, 292 n. 2
Shakespeare, William: works drawn upon, Antony and Cleopatra, 195–96, 213, 218–19, 235–36; Cymbeline, 277–79; Hamlet, 183, 228, 250; Julius Caesar, 195; King Lear, 236, 267–68; Macbeth, 3, 125, 213–14, 236, 272; Measure for Measure, 195, 217, 219, 228, 232, 250; Othello, 3; Romeo and Juliet, 232; Sonnets, 219–20
Sidney, Sir Philip, 78; Arcadia (elegies for Basilius), 122–24, 137; and dirge from Cymbeline, 279; and Marvell’s “Horatian Ode,” 131, 133; and Spenser’s “November,” 124
Socrates, as personal example and model: 6, 181, 211; Phaedo, 23, 29, 268. See also Montaigne
Spectators (and poets), 83, 85–86, 254–55
Spenser, Edmund: The Faerie Queene, 198–99; The Shepheards Calender, “November,” 121–22. See also Marvell; Sidney Stannard, David E., The Puritan Way of Death, 285 n. 15, 259–60
Stoicism, 7, 8, 181–82
Stukely, Sir Lewis, 30
Suckling, Sir John, 244–45
Taylor, Jeremy, 251, 265–66
Thomas, Lewis, the body and dying, 280, 296 nn. 18, 19
Tichborne, Chidiock, 76–83, 286–87 nn. 1, 2; and Shakespeare’s “Dirge,” 296 n. 17
Time: carpe diem, 196–99; imagined and ordered—major examples, 81–83 (Tichborne), 88–91, 93 (Raleigh), 106–9 (Donne), 113–15 (G. Herbert), 159 (Milton); special order of, and return to common time, 122 (Spenser), 139 (King), 141 (Donne), 152 (Jonson), 156 (Milton)
Tolstoi, Leo, 269–70
Tounson, Robert, 31, 32, 36
Traherne, Thomas, 291 n. 5
Transfers and exchanges: as in death, 140–41 (Ann Donne), 128–29, 136 (Marvell’s Cromwell), 132 (Charles I); as from one part of soul to another, 125; as in images, 73, 151–52; as in mourning, 137; as in twentieth-century denial of death, 261
Typology, 15–16, 21–22, 61, 284 n. 14
Vaughan, Henry, 216–17, 227–28
Vaux, Thomas, “I loathe that I did love,” 69–70
Waller, Edmund, 248
Walton, Izaak: on death of Donne, 252; on death of Wotton, 25–27; on Donne preaching sermon for Lady Danvers, 52
Weller, Barry, 294 n. 28
“Whanne mine eyhnen misten,” 173
“What else is hell, but losse of blisfull heaven?” 172–73
Wotton, Sir Henry: “Upon the Death of Sir Albert Morton’s Wife,” 138, 289 n. 3. See also Walton
Yates, Frances, 186–87