Swift, the Book, and the Irish Financial Revolution

Moore, Sean D.

Published by Johns Hopkins University Press

Moore, Sean D.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/475

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=8830
CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix
Note to Reader xiii

Introduction
Ireland, the Fiscal-Military State, and the Colonial Print Media 1

1 “God knows how we wretches came by that fashionable thing a national debt”: The Dublin Book Trade and the Irish Financial Revolution 26

2 Banking on Print: The Bank of Ireland, the South Sea Bubble, and the Bailout 59

3 Arachne’s Bowels: Scatology, Enlightenment, and Swift’s Relations with the London Book Trade 90

4 “Money, the Great Divider of the World, has, by a strange Revolution, been the great Uniter of a Most divided People”: From Minting to Printing in The Drapier’s Letters 134

5 Devouring Posterity: A Modest Proposal, Empire, and Ireland’s “Debt of the Nation” 168

6 “A Mart of Literature”: The 1730s and the Rise of a Literary Public Sphere in Ireland 190

Epilogue
A Brand Identity Crisis in a National Literature? 214

Notes 217
Bibliography 237
Index 259
This page intentionally left blank