Imperial Emotions
Javier Krauel

Published by Liverpool University Press

Krauel, Javier.
Imperial Emotions: Cultural Responses to Myths of Empire in Fin-de-Siècle Spain.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/72707.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/72707

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=2492764
Although this book bears little resemblance to my dissertation, it could not have been written without the intellectual stimulation I was lucky enough to find in the Department of Romance Studies at Duke University. I would like to thank my adviser, Alberto Moreiras, as well as my teachers there: Meg Greer, Walter Mignolo, Gabriela Nouzeilles, Stephanie Sieburth, and Teresa Vilarós. Barbara Herrnstein Smith deserves special thanks for her continued generosity and for suggesting the title of the book.

During the time this book was being written, a number of friends and colleagues provided invaluable support of all kinds. Special thanks to my friends and family in Spain and the United States; to Raúl Antelo, Julio Baena, Anne Becher, Amy S. Carroll, Juan Pablo Dabove, Daniel Gilden, Luis González del Valle, Patrick Greaney, Juan Herrero Senés, Asunción Horno-Delgado, Edgar Illas, Ricardo Landeira, Jorge Marturano, Alejandro Mejías-López, Javier Rivas, José María Rodríguez García, Biel Sansano, José Luis Villacañas Berlanga, Doreen Williams, and my colleagues in the Department of Spanish and Portuguese at the University of Colorado, Boulder; to Rolena Adorno and Peter Elmore for their careful reading of, and critical responses to, significant portions of the manuscript; to Roberta Johnson for inviting me to present parts of the manuscript at UCLA at the Southern California Peninsularistas meeting in 2011, an event that was important for the overall project; to Brigitte Shull for her interest in the project; to Elena Delgado for believing in it; to the readers for Liverpool University Press for their suggestions; to Sue Barnes, my production editor at Carnegie Book Production, for her attentive editorial work; and to Anthony Cond, my editor at Liverpool University Press, for his assistance, patience, and good humor.

I would also like to gratefully acknowledge permission to publish earlier versions of two chapters in the present book: Chapter 1 is an expanded version of “Notes on the Conflicting Uses of the Imperial Past: Spain in 1892,” Anales de la literatura española contemporánea, 36.1 (2011), pp. 133–62; Chapter 3 is a slightly different version of “Ángel Ganivet’s Idearium español as Fin-de-Siècle Imperial Melancholia,” Revista Hispánica Moderna, 65.2 (2012), pp. 181–97.

The grants I received in 2008 from the Graduate Committee on the Arts and Humanities at the University of Colorado, Boulder, and from the Program for Cultural Cooperation between Spain’s Ministry of Culture and United States Universities allowed me to carry out archival research in Madrid and Barcelona that was crucial to the arguments put forward in Chapter 1. Students in my graduate seminars “Making the Imperial Past Present: Literature and National Memory” (Spring 2010) and “The Poetics of the Essay in Modern Spain” (Spring 2012) helped me refine many of the claims defended in this book and provided intellectual company along the way.

The manuscript benefited greatly, more than I will ever be able to repay, from stimulating intellectual conversations with Virginia C. Tuma who, in addition to sharpening the whole manuscript, was kind enough to carefully review it and rigorously edit it. I thank her from the bottom of my heart for this and much else. The book is dedicated to her.