The theme of this book is cultural encounter and exchange in Irish women's lives. Using three case studies - the Enlightenment, emigration and modernism - it analyses reading and popular and consumer culture as sites of negotiation of gender roles. Reading the Irish Woman traces how the circulation of ideas, fantasies and aspirations has shaped women's lives in actuality and in imagination, and argues that there were many different ways of being a woman. Attention to women's cultural consumption and production shows that one individual may in one day identify with representations of heroines of romantic fiction, patriots, philanthropists, literary ladies, film stars, career women, popular singers, advertising models and foreign missionaries. The processes of cultural consumption, production and exchange provide evidence of women's agency, aspirations and activities within and far beyond the domestic sphere.

Gerardine Meaney is Director of the Humanities Institute of Ireland at University College Dublin.
Mary O'Dowd is Professor of Gender History at Queen's University, Belfast.
Bernadette Whelan is Senior Lecturer in the Department of History at the University of Limerick.

www.liverpooluniversitypress.co.uk
Cover Photo by John J. Clarke
(c. 1890–1910)
Clarke Photographic Collection. Courtesy of the National Library of Ireland (www.nli.ie)