Contents

List of Figures ix
Note on References x
A Personal Preface xi

What SF Is

1 Coming Out of the Science Fiction Closet 3
   ‘Learning to Read Science Fiction’ 6

2 Rejecting Gesture Politics 24
   ‘Literary Gatekeepers and the Fabril Tradition’ 26

3 Getting Away from the Facilior Lectio 47
   ‘Semiotic Ghosts and Ghostlinesses in the Work of Bruce Sterling’ 50

SF and Change

4 Getting Serious with the Fans 67
   ‘Science Fiction and the Idea of History’ 70

5 Getting to Grips with the Issue of Cultures … 85
   ‘Cultural Engineering: A Theme in Science Fiction’ 89

6 … And Not Fudging the Issue! 103
   ‘“People are Plastic”: Jack Vance and the Dilemma of Cultural Relativism’ 106

7 SF Authors Really Mean what they Say 121
   ‘Alternate Historians: Newt, Kingers, Harry and Me’ 124
8  A Revealing Failure by the Critics  141
   ‘Kingsley Amis’s Science Fiction and the Problems of Genre’  144

9  A Glimpse of Structuralist Possibility  160
   ‘The Golden Bough and the Incorportations of Magic in Science Fiction’  162

10  Serious Issues, Serious Traumas, Emotional Depth  182
    ‘The Magic Art and the Evolution of Words: Ursula Le Guin’s “Earthsea” Trilogy’  185

SF and Politics

11  A First Encounter with Politics  207
    ‘The Cold War in Science Fiction, 1940–1960’  209

12  Language Corruption, and Rocking the Boat  229
    ‘Variations on Newspeak: The Open Question of Nineteen Eighty-Four’  233

13  Just Before the Disaster  255
    ‘The Fall of America in Science Fiction’  258

14  Why Politicians, and Producers, Should Read Science Fiction  274
    ‘The Critique of America in Contemporary Science Fiction’  277

15  Saying (When Necessary) the Lamentable Word  293
    ‘Starship Troopers, Galactic Heroes, Mercenary Princes: The Military and its Discontents in Science Fiction’  296

References  311
Index  321