Acknowledgments

This volume began as a November 2012 workshop on “Gendering Marginalized Interests” at the University of Miami. This workshop was sponsored by the University of Miami’s Scientists and Engineers Expanding Diversity and Success (SEEDS) Program, itself a product of a National Science Foundation Advance grant, the University of Miami Women’s and Gender Studies Program, and the University of Miami’s Department of Political Science. Four of the contributors to this volume—Louise K. Davidson-Schmich, Barbara Donovan, Angelika von Wahl, and Christina Xydias—along with Sarah Wiliarty of Wesleyan University, attended. In the intervening years we recruited contributors from around the world, including Jeff Bale, Katja M. Guenther, Annette Henninger, Lisa Pfahl, and Swantje Köbsell. We met and presented various versions of the chapters at meetings of the American Political Science Association, the Council for European Studies, the European Consortium for Political Research’s Standing Group on Gender and Politics, the German Studies Association, and the Midwest Political Science Association. Louise Davidson-Schmich presented parts of the book at the University of Miami Faculty Colloquium and at a conference on “Resistance, Backlash, and Power: Gender Equality and Feminist New Practice in EU and Global Discourse” held at the University of Canterbury in Christchurch, New Zealand. Many thanks to all who attended these presentations to offer their feedback as well as to three anonymous reviewers and a helpful member of the University of Michigan Press’s Executive Committee. We also extend our thanks to Melody Herr, formerly of the University of Michigan Press, for her faith in our project, and to Mary Francis, Meredith Norwich, Danielle Coty, and Kevin Rennells at Michigan, for their assistance in preparing the manuscript for publication. Finally, we acknowledge the efforts of all the members of the intersectional groups in Germany we have studied. They are fighting to build alliances and make their voices heard to create a more just world.