This work is the product of more years than I would like to admit. That it has finally seen the light of day, so to speak, is due to the support of a number of institutions and individuals.

I began this project as a doctoral student at the University of Texas at Austin, where I received financial, collegial, and moral support. Generous gifts to the Department of History from Eugene and Dora Bonham, John Paul Jones, Alice J. D. Sheffield, and Gardner F. Marston funded early research. The Berlin Program for Advanced German and European Studies at the Freie Universität Berlin and the Social Science Research Council supported my dissertation research, offered me a supportive and challenging institutional home while I was in Berlin, and introduced me to some of my closest friends and colleagues. The Zentrum für zeithistorische Forschung in Potsdam was a fount of generous and collegial scholars. Special thanks go to Christoph Klessmann and Thomas Lindenberger. Thanks to the members of my dissertation committee, David Crew, Peter Jelavich, Joan Neuberger, Tracie Matysik, and Sabine Hake; each one is a model scholar I can only hope to emulate.

Virginia Tech has been my institutional home for almost a decade, through thick and thin. The Department of History and the College of Liberal Arts and Human Sciences have provided support invaluable research support through a number of travel and research grants and stipends. The Jerome Niles Faculty Research Fellowship supported the final writing of the manuscript. Thanks also to my friends and colleagues at Virginia Tech, with whom I have shared and surmounted far more than any of us could have imagined.

I must acknowledge the support given by research professionals on two continents, without whom this work would not have been possible. I am indebted to the friendly and dedicated staff of Inter-library Loan at Virginia Tech. The staffs of the German Federal Archives in Lichterfelde and Dahlwitz-

Hoppegarten, the German Broadcasting Archives in Berlin-Babelsberg and Frankfurt, and the State Library of Berlin are credits to their profession. Dr. Ina Iske-Schwaen curates the archives of her late husband, Kurt Schwaen, and I especially thank her for her generosity (and hospitality) in sharing his life’s work.

Thanks are also due to my family. Jane and J. Pat Stephens have cheerfully encouraged me throughout the project. Thanks to my parents, John and Penny Gumbert, for their patience and support through what sometimes seemed an interminable task. I dedicate this book to them. My “Doktorvater” David Crew has offered unflagging encouragement that sustained me through the writing of the manuscript. I value tremendously his scholarship, his friendship, and his admonition to finally “finish it!” Finally, I thank my husband Robert Stephens for his encouragement, partnership, and confidence in me.
