Although designed by the Hungarian Nicholas Kis in about 1690, the model for Janson Text was mistakenly attributed to the Dutch printer Anton Janson. Kis’ original matrices were found in Germany and acquired by the Stempel foundry in 1919. This version of Janson comes from the Stempel foundry and was designed from the original type; it was issued by Linotype in digital form in 1985. —courtesy www.adobe.com

Gothic 13 is a Linotype font, designed by Robert Hunter Middleton. It is a traditional American condensed gothic design, often used for headlines in newspapers and magazines. —courtesy www.fonts.com

In 1987, Sumner Stone completed his designs for the Stone type family, which consists of three subfamilies, Serif, Sans, and Informal. In 1992, John Renner finished designing phonetic companion faces for ITC Stone Sans and ITC Stone Serif. The result is a font palette that can be combined successfully over a broad spectrum of typographic applications. —courtesy www.adobe.com
