Acknowledgments

While the eight chapters of this book are based on my own scholarly work, I certainly want to acknowledge that no serious scholarship ever takes place in an absolute vacuum. Thus many of the statements and observations in this study were informed by primary and secondary sources, by discussions with colleagues at conferences, and by the invaluable talks with my students. My departmental colleagues and friends Gideon Bavly, Maggie Gordon, Theresia Hoeck, Dennis Mahoney, Kevin McKenna, Kenneth Nalibow, Susanna Nazarova, Helga Schreckenberger, David Scrase, Janet Sobieski, and Beatrice Wood have been incredibly supportive, and my work-study students Valentina Griffin, Courtney Maguire, Maida Omerović, Benjamin Perkins, and Erin Regan have provided much-appreciated help. I am also deeply indebted to Lisa Brooks, Barbara Lamonda, Daryl Purvee, and Nancy Rosedale of the Interlibrary Loan Department of the Bailey-Howe Library at the University of Vermont for obtaining important secondary sources. I also benefitted from the expertise of the two reference librarians Jake Barickman and Karl Bridges. As I express my appreciation to all of these kind people, I also want to thank my fellow folklorists and proverb scholars Shirley L. Arora, Ronald Baker, Dan Ben-Amos, Simon Bronner, Jan Harold Brunvand, Charles Clay Doyle, Alan Dundes, Kimberly J. Lau, Isaac Jack Lévy and Rosemary Lévy Zumwalt, Jay Mechling, Elliott Oring, Anand Prahlad, Barry Toelken, Peter Tokofsky, Olga Trokhimenko, and Stephen D. Winick for their work and insights that continue to inform my own research. Finally, thanks are also due to the journal editors for permitting me to include five previously published chapters in this book.