Machine Scoring of Student Essays
Haswell, Richard, Ericsson, Patricia Freitag

Published by Utah State University Press

Haswell, Richard and Patricia Freitag Ericsson.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/9292.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/9292

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=238688
CONTENTS

Introduction 1
  Patricia Freitag Ericsson and Richard H. Haswell

1 Interested Complicities: The Dialectic of Computer-Assisted Writing Assessment 8
  Ken S. McAllister and Edward M. White

2 The Meaning of Meaning: Is a Paragraph More than an Equation? 28
  Patricia Freitag Ericsson

3 Can’t Touch This: Reflections on the Servitude of Computers as Readers 38
  Chris M. Anson

4 Automatons and Automated Scoring: Drudges, Black Boxes, and Dei Ex Machina 57
  Richard H. Haswell

5 Taking a Spin on the Intelligent Essay Assessor 79
  Tim McGee

6 ACCUPLACER’s Essay-Scoring Technology: When Reliability Does Not Equal Validity 93
  Edmund Jones

7 WritePlacer Plus in Place: An Exploratory Case Study 114
  Anne Herrington and Charles Moran

8 E-Write as a Means for Placement into Three Composition Courses: A Pilot Study 130
  Richard N. Matzen Jr. and Colleen Sorensen

9 Computerized Writing Assessment: Community College Faculty Find Reasons to Say “Not Yet” 138
  William W. Ziegler

10 Piloting the COMPASS E-Write Software at Jackson State Community College 147
  Teri T. Maddox
11 The Role of the Writing Coordinator in a Culture of Placement by ACCUPLACER 154
   Gail S. Corso
12 Always Already: Automated Essay Scoring and Grammar-Checkers in College Writing Courses 166
   Carl Whithaus
13 Automated Essay Grading in the Sociology Classroom: Finding Common Ground 177
   Edward Brent and Martha Townsend
14 Automated Writing Instruction: Computer-Assisted or Computer-Driven Pedagogies? 199
   Beth Ann Rothermel
15 Why Less Is Not More: What We Lose by Letting a Computer Score Writing Samples 211
   William Condon
16 More Work for Teacher? Possible Futures of Teaching Writing in the Age of Computerized Writing Assessment 221
   Bob Broad
   Richard H. Haswell
Glossary 244
Notes 246
References 251
Index 262