Dermatophagoides
Ken Brewer

In extreme density perhaps 3,500 mites live in a gram of dust, like angels.
They feed on flakes of skin, hair,
all the detritus we shake away.

Not even the air around us is empty.
Dust mites have their own detritus.
Invisible pellets of mite feces float like balloons on the slightest whisper.