Working on the Railroad, Walking in Beauty

Youngdahl, Jay

Published by Utah State University Press

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/10577

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=271300
Contents

Foreword, Michael D. Jackson viii
Preface xi
Introduction 1

An introduction to the Navajo Nation 2
Navajo railroad work 6
The legal background of Navajo railroad work 9
Language, space, and time 13
“Pastoral life” and “modern civilization” 18
The fixed and the fluid 22
The meaning and importance of Navajo strategies 24

One: Life on the Tracks 27

Meeting Jerry Sandoval 27
Wage labor and the Navajo 30
The work of railroad trackmen 33
Jerry Sandoval’s experience 39

Two: Religion on the Rez 44

A Pentecostal family 44
Religious practices on the Navajo Nation 45
Traditional Navajo religion 46
The Native American Church 53
Christianity on the rez 56
A short discussion with Harry Walters 62
The centrality of hózhó 65
David Sangster—A conversation about the interplay of religious traditions 67

Three: A Visit with a Medicine Man 70

Meeting John Sandoval 70

John’s work as a medicine man 72

The Long Walk 76

John Wayne on the wall 79

Four: Adversaries and Advocates 82

The Bureau of Indian Affairs: Friend or foe to the Navajo worker? 82

Efforts at “de-culturating” the Navajo worker 88

The Unitarian Service Committee’s project with Navajo railroad workers 93

Five: How Did Navajo Men Come to Work for the Railroads? 103

Tom Caydaitto—Using the Blessingway and the Enemyway 103

A visit to Chicago 105

The impetus from World War II 108

The Railroad Retirement Board develops a system for Navajo railroad work 111

The RRB implements its manpower system for the railroads 113

The system matures 118

Six: Railroads, Trading Posts, and a Fatal Challenge to the RRB’s System 123

Leroy Yazzie—“Go round up some Navajos” 123

The railroads take full advantage 124

The RRB works to please the railroads 126
Contents

Sparks fly between the RRB and the railroads 129
Issues at the trading posts 132
An important journalist takes note 135
The legal service lawyers enter 138
The end of the system 141

Seven: In the Workers’ Words 144

Tom Martinez—Following in the footsteps of the Holy People 144
The Pintos—Husband and wife healers 146
Dickie and Marilyn Sandoval—A family that followed the tracks 153
Joe Mace—Finding a personal military connection 156
The Spencers—“My crystal is like the white man’s computer” 159

Eight: Anchoring and Adaptability, Fixed yet Fluid 163
Afterword 173
Selected Bibliography 174
Index 181