FIRST LADY

Whole, the land soaks pressure like a bandage, the slow break of time
across the nightstand clock, the sleet in chains
past the window’s swart lid, pearl wind rotting the yule: (underwear, cars, underwear.)
Your gown is priceless.
Stung like a rabbit, you dream your feet stepping to a country-sized landmine until in a loose flash the face-shaped leaves and high tidal trees release floating boxes of the dead, a bastard’s returning theme:
text, ghost text.
