Acknowledgments

I originally intended this memoir as a marker for my thirtieth year of sobriety, a surprise for my daughters on a milestone anniversary. As a practicing poet I actually had little hope of writing past page 3. Therefore, I offer my amazed thanks: to Diane Goodman and A. Manette Ansay, and to Deborah Schneider, all of whom believed in the accomplishment before I did; to Linda Braasch, Connie Hough Cronin, Sarah Gamoke, Pamela Hammons, Gema Perez-Sanchez, Steve Butterman, and Anne Laughlin for their excellent friendship and reads (Annie also recommended it to Joan Larkin, editor of the Living Out series at the University of Wisconsin Press, who, along with Raphael Kadushin at the press, immediately supported it); to Niki Nolin and Cin Salach, my sister artists through much of the writing in Michigan; to Sandra Catlin and Nancy Simmons, proprietors of the Labrys Wilderness Resort at Sleeping Bear Dunes National Seashore; to my family, Jennifer, Emily, and Lori, who continue to adore me no matter which of my secrets I reveal or keep; and, finally, to New Mexicans Beth, Jean, Karen, Prentiss, and especially Marsha, essential goddesses. I love you all.
