The Lavender Vote
Hertzog, Mark

Published by NYU Press

Hertzog, Mark.
The Lavender Vote: Lesbians, Gay Men, and Bisexuals in American Electoral Politics.
NYU Press, 1996.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/15736.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/15736

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=493838
REFERENCES

Works Cited

261

References

make its point; 'ACT-UP,' gay and yuppie, uses raids, phone 'zaps' to spotlight health crisis." Wall Street Journal, 7 December, 1.

References

References

harassment of gay men, lesbians and bisexuals in Charlottesville.” Unpublished term paper, Sexual Minorities course, Department of Psychology, University of Virginia, spring term.

Pugh, Clifford. 1992. "Despite platform, gays say they'll figure in future GOP.” Houston Post, 18 August, C11.

References

Additional Works Consulted

References

References

Gonsorick, John C. 1982a. "Results of psychological testing on homosexual populations."

_——_. 1982b. "Social psychological concepts in the understanding of homosexuality."

References

Maloney, Stephen R. 1976. "The lavender menace: Though many homosexuals are harmless and even goodly, the 'gay liberation' movement is tawdry, libertine, and barbaric." Alternatives 10 (December): 12–15.

References

Marlack, Carol. 1989. “Gay clout: Galvanized by the AIDS crisis, gay and lesbian activists are lobbying for civil rights along with government action to fight the epidemic; politicians are ill at ease.” National Journal 22 (6 January): 16–19.

Rosenfeld, Jeffrey P. 1986. “Demographics of vacation: Gray travel, gay travel, and touring teens are just some of the lucrative markets for the vacation industry.” American Demographics 8 (January): 38–41.

References

