The Beginning of Terror
Kleinbard, David

Published by NYU Press

Kleinbard, David.
The Beginning of Terror: A Psychological Study of Rainer Maria Rilke's Life and Work.
NYU Press, 1993.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/15753.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/15753

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=494244
Index

Aestheticism, 14–16
Albert-Lazard, Lulu, 243
Alcoforado, Marianna, 196
Angels: in First, Second, and Seventh Elegies, 139–40, 200, 232; as vital form of poet's genius, 224, 232–33
Andreas, Friedrich Carl, 88
Andreas-Salomé, Lou (Luise), 1, 7–9, 11–12, 16, 26, 40, 42, 45, 48, 52, 63, 66, 68, 71, 79, 81, 88–109, 110, 112–13, 116–18, 121–22, 124–28, 130, 132, 151–52, 154, 158, 163, 165, 176, 178, 182–83, 212–14, 218, 230, 237, 241; as a destroyer, 92, 107; empathetic responsiveness, 97–98; fantasy of unity with, 109; idealization of, 102, 107–8; as a maternal figure with the Creator's power, 90–92; maternal mirroring, 97–100, 102, 104; and Nietzsche, 88–89; oedipal dimension of Rilke's relationship with, 81–82; response to Rodin, 94–95; and Rilke's fear of a devouring mother, 92; on Rilke's growth as an artist, 94–96; Rilke's letters to, 174, 182; and Rilke's need of mothering, 88; Rilke's pain at separation from, 218–19; as second mother, 88, 91–92, 94, 100, 102, 105; as shelter, 109; as a source of Rilke's sense of his own reality, 94–95, 105–7; as a source of shame, 100; stature in German world of letters, 90; as informal therapist, 106 “Archaic love,” 101
Aristocracy: friends and patrons, 55, 57, 59; fantasies of ancestral heroes, 143; myth of aristocratic Rilkes, 80, 81, 143, 173; Rilke's persona, 52, 58–59
Arnim, Bettina von, 194, 225, 230, 231
Art: abstract form, 115, 146–47; “anonymous work,” 19; autonomous art, 20–21; as an artist's defense against disturbance, 183; characterization, 146–47; childhood prototypes, 181; corrupted forms of writing in Rilke's view, 20; fragmentary form in The Notebooks, 2; fragmentary form in Picasso and Joyce, 2; indirectness and concealment in, 33–54; irony, 53, 146–47, 149; metamorphosis in, 221, 224; modernists and post-modernists, 13, 46; “my art,” 210; “objective expression,” 20, 39; as an artist's means of objectifying and distancing, 159; portraits of Parisian figures in Rilke's letters, 95–96; “real, still things,” 182; Rilke's conception of genius, 203, 216, 222–24; Rilke's contrast between sculpture and writing, 179–80; Rilke on unity of art object, 35; Rodin's disintegrative and reintegrating sculpture, 36; schizophrenic art, 46; writing as “self-treatment,” 44. See also Andreas-Salomé, Lou; Creativity; Rilke's writings; Rodin, Auguste; Satiric irony in Rilke's writings; Transformation in Rilke's writings 267
Artist, Rilke's conception of, 97-98, 224
Artists' community at Worpswede, 110.
See also Modersohn-Becker, Paula;
Rilke-Westhoff, Clara
"Auditory imagination," 10
Autobiography of a Schizophrenic Girl, 35
Balint, Alice, 101
Balint, Michael, 102
Baudelaire, Charles, 13, 16, 20, 39; "Une Charogne," 47, 195, 212
Beethoven, Ludwig van, 62, 194, 231
Benjamin, Walter, 13
Betz, Maurice, 75
Binion, Rudolph, 121
Bisexuality, 233-34, 243; androgyny, 14, 16; confusion about sexual identity, 76, 243; hermaphroditic wholeness, 9, 231-35, 243; hermaphroditic motherhood, 183, 231, 233; Winnicott on sexual ambiguity, 242-44
Body image: decomposition of, 32, 34, 175; confusion about, 76
Bosch, Hieronymous, "Temptation of Saint Anthony" (painting), 84-85
Boundaries of the self, 50, 83, 85; dissolution of, 6, 33, 38, 225-26. See also Differentiation; Engulfment
Bourgeoisie, Rilke's aversion to, in the Fourth Elegy, 153.
Bradley, Brigitte L., 13, 19-21
Brown, Norman O., 233
Butler, Eliza M., 81, 118, 134, 165, 170, 187
Cézanne, Paul, 3, 20, 39, 41, 195
Characterization, abstraction and integration in The Notebooks, 146-47
Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy, in The Notebooks, 36
Child's experience: earliest possessions, 180-81; effects of love for mentally ill mother, 83; fear of destroying mother's love, 219; love for the mother as part of self, 127; Malte's fears in The Notebooks, 79-80, 85; prototypes of works of art, 185
Chodorow, Nancy J., 65-66
Choiseul, Duchesse Lucie Marie de, 198
Condensation, 241
Contratton, Susan, 65-66
Core of the personality, 56, 60; Modell on core of identification, 175
Creativity: and bisexuality, 243; creative activity as a defense, 183; creative narcissism, 10, 217, 233; creative thinking vs. compliance, 238; Rilke on gazing, 123; genius in, 2, 40, 47, 217, 223-24, 230-31, 233-34, 240-41; intersection of genius and abnormality, 181; "learning to see" in The Notebooks, 170; and "loss of ego control," 46; psychology of creative process, 2, 11, 15-16, 45-47, 139-40, 143, 242; Rilke's insights into the creative process, 123-24; schizoid fragmentation in, 43; and solitude 62-63, 237-40. See also Narcissism
Cubist painting, 46
Dante Alighieri, Inferno, 206
David-Rhonfeld, Valerie von, 70, 134
Death: Rilke's conception of, 39, 41-43, 45, 159, 162, 221, 228; continuing connection with the dead, 133, 158-59, 161, 216-17, 221-25, 241-42; denial of, 159, 228; effects of a parent's, 163-64, 187; as fetus and fruit growing within us, 39; as plenitude and fulfillment, 229. See also Knoop, Vera
Dehumanization, 5, 20, 37, 50, 59
Denial, 52
Depersonalization, 37, 56, 76, 152, 161, 197
Derealization, 161
Derealization, 161
Differentiation, 6, 11, 33, 35, 38, 48; capacity for, 238; impairment of, 48, 50-51, 53, 72, 238. See also Boundaries of the Self; Impingement
Disintegration, 2, 39, 47; fantasies of, 3, 33, 36, 45, 71, 106; fear of, 78, 148, 171, 174, 177, 182; as a stage in the creative process, 46, 240; fragmentation, 34, 78, 82-83, 174-75. See also Integration
Displacement, 72, 81, 83-84, 99, 106, 139, 178, 231, 233, 244; in "David Sings before Saul," 207; in Rilke's conception of Rodin's art, 185
INDEX 269

Dostoevsky, Fyodor, 16, 44, 234; Notes from Underground, 51, 214
Drozhzhin, Spiridon D., 103
Duse, Eleonora, 52-54

Earth in the Ninth Elegy, 225
Ego: Freud on, 162; id and, 162; and identity formation, 11, 162; impairment of ego functions, 174; and sublimation, 162
Ego ideal, 140, 234

Ende, Hans am, 24
Engulfment: 3, 5, 38, 51-52, 53, 55-57, 62, 72, 74, 83, 128, 174, 197, 219; defenses against, 5, 52, 152, 158; and the fear of being devoured, 52, 55, 72, 128; and flight from women, 113; merging, 48, 50-51, 174
Eurydice, 223-24, 228-29
Exner, Richard, 14-16

Face, concept of, 54-55, 60; effacement, 37; in “To Lou Andreas-Salomé,” 109
False self, 55-57, 59-61, 152, 190. See also Schizoid illness; True self
Father: ambivalence about, in Ewald Tragy, 136; anger of, in Ewald Tragy, 139; encourages child’s contact with external world, 171; encourages separation and differentiation of self and other, 135; fear of a vengeful, punishing parent, 108, 139; images of the father in Rilke’s writings, 133-40, 145-46, 146-54, 197-98, 200, 203-8; oedipal fathers in Kafka and Lawrence, 138-39; Rilke on effects of a father’s death, 156
Figurative language: and the artist’s need for concealment, 53-54. See also Art; Kierkegaard, Søren; Nietzsche, Friedrich; Winnicott, D. W.
Flaubert, Gustave, 16, 20; “St. Julien l’Hospitalier,” 195
Freud, Sigmund, 16, 27, 32, 34, 40-41, 44, 80, 89, 113, 115, 126, 158, 162, 176, 182, 218, 233, 235
Gebsattel, Victor Emil von, 11, 106
“Gegenstandlichkeit,” 17
Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von, 231
Greenacre, Phyllis, 31
Grosz, Georg, satiric art of, 146

Hamburger, Käte, 13
Hass, Robert, 66
Hattingberg, Magda von (“Benvenuta”), 66, 75, 77, 113, 131-33, 149, 181, 210-12, 216-18
Hausenstein, Wilhelm, 55, 58, 60, 151
Heller, Erich, 52
Hendry, J. F., 11
Hennebert, Marthe, 241
Hero, the, in the Sixth Elegy, 144
Heydt, Karl von der, 187, 192, 237
Hitschmann, E., 81
Holland, Norman N., 178
Home, Rilke’s concept of, 124-25, 130
Homelessness, 59
Hulewicz, Witold von, 36, 86, 201
Hume, David, 31
Huysssen, Andreas, 12, 19
Hypochondriacal fantasies, 78, 175

Ibsen, Henrik, 52, 88-89
Idealization: of Lou Andreas-Salomé, 107-8; of parents and parental figures, 8, 64, 106-8, 158, 164, 172-73, 175, 232; of perfect self-containment, 184; of Rodin, 157, 166, 171, 186, 192; of the superego, 174; of women in love, 218
Identification, 8, 11, 32, 163, 181, 244; child’s with mentally ill mother, 82-83, 85; with the Creator, 97; with dead parents, 162; with “good enough” parents, 176; fear of, see Engulfment; with the hero of the Cornet, 143; with Josef, 145, 151-52, 169; models for, 169; Malte’s with Maman, 84; with omnipotent parental figures, 175; of the poet with his poems, 184; with Phia, 101, 218; and redirection of libido, 235; with Rodin, 177, 191; with Salomé, 218; with women in love, abandoned, 218
Impingement, 50, 55-56, 61, 72, 85; defense against, 239; Rilke’s vulnerability to, 240
INDEX

Incestuous feelings, 81–82, 90, 113
Incorporation, 11, 163, 177; and identification, 218
Integration, 11, 32–33, 175, 238; impairment of, 34, 36, 45, 72. See also Disintegration
Internalization, 8, 11, 86; of the female world, 217–18; “internal objects,” 180, 240–41; of idealized parents, 106–7; of Josef’s fear, 153; of objects that have been lost, 163; of Vera Knoop, 237
Introject, 154, 159, 163; of punishing parent, 163–64
Introjection, 9, 11, 153–54, 159, 162–63, 235; of parents, 174, 176; in Sonnet I.2, 224; of a supportive, empathetic mother, 239; of Vera Knoop, 231, 241
“Invisible, the,” 64, 225, 236, 240
Isolation: as a defense against engulfment, 51; Malte’s, 62, 238; exacerbation of illness, 184; at Muzot, 238; of negative from positive feelings, 77, 146, 157–58; of sexuality from idealizing love, 113. See also Solitude
Jacobsen, Jens Peter, 16
Joyce, James, 2, 46; A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man, 115
Jugendstil, 20, 24
Kant, Immanuel, 115
Kappus, Franz Xaver, 62, 67
Keats, John, 211
Keller, Gottfried, 81
Key, Ellen, 71, 75, 136–39, 154, 156, 159
Kierkegaard, Søren, 5, 16, 53, 61, 158, 195
Klein, Melanie, 163–64, 240
Kleist, Heinrich von, 16; On the Marienette Theater, 181
Klossowska, Elizabeth Dorothee (“Baldine,” “Merline”), 40, 63, 218
Knoop, Vera, 10, 220–28, 230–31, 235, 251, 243–44; dancer, musician, and artist, 223–24, 226; illness and death, 221, 226, 229, 242; openness to the world, 225; and Rilke’s inner Mädchen, 242; Rilke’s internalization of, 231, 237, 241; Rilke’s sense of intimacy with, 222
Kohut, Heinz, 5, 7, 33, 77–78, 86, 96–97, 106–7, 172–75
Kokoschka, Oskar, 146
Komar, Kathleen L., 14
Lacan, Jacques, 32–33
Laing, R. D., 5, 7, 33, 50, 56, 62
Lawrence, D. H., Sons and Lovers, 138, 145–46
Leppmann, Wolfgang, 11, 55, 59, 81, 90, 115, 142, 194
“Lyric I, the,” 13
Mackensen, Fritz, 24
Magical thinking, 175–76, 180, 186, 237
Masks and masking, 6, 54, 60; acting as, 52; in The Notebooks, 52, 57, 190; in the Fourth Elegy, 153. See also False self; Sense of Self in Rilke, and Social personas
Mastery: in Rilke’s art, 70, 145, 192, 202, 231; of his father in his art, 159; mastering his fears through his art, 182; in Rilke’s relationship with Clara, 117; self-mastery, 149, 151
Meissner, W. W., 154, 155, 159
Military school, 155, 162
Mirrors and mirroring, 8–10, 32, 125–28, 239; maternal mirroring, 168, 174; as metaphor for Angels in the Second Elegy, 232; in The Notebooks, 37–38, 231, 232; in Sonnet II.4, 232. See also Andreas-Salomé, Lou; Mother; Rilke-Westhoff, Clara
Mitchell, Stephen, 225
Modell, Arnold H., 7, 175–76, 185, 188
Modersohn, Otto, 24–26, 104, 110, 116
Modersohn-Becker, Paula, 24, 103, 110–
INDEX 271

Mother: as comforter and protector in The Notebooks and the Third Elegy, 10, 64, 71, 73, 105, 168, 180; painful dependence on, 100; desire to invent a lovable mother, 81; as destroyer, 74, 108; disguised surrogate in The Sonnets, 231–32, 241; effects of lack of empathy, 77–78; effects of mental and emotional illness on child, 78, 82–83, 85–86; fantasy of fusion with, 102; fantasies of maternal perfection, 65–66, 108, 143; “good enough” (D. W. Winnicott’s concept), 168; maternal face and presence, 99; fear of a vengeful, punishing parent, 108; maternal failures and destructiveness, 65; maternal figures in Rilke’s works, 10; maternal mirroring, 10, 77–78, 97–98, 104, 168, 174; narcissistic, 77–79; original unity with, 109; as a parasite, 74; as part of self, 117; polarizing of Phia Rilke and Salomé, 107–8; possessive mother in Sons and Lovers, 138–39; primal mother in Unfinished Elegy of 1920, 121; and “protective environment,” 239–40; Rilke’s search for, 108, 167; as source of child’s sense of solidity and form, 105. See also Andreas-Salome, Lou; Rilke, Sophie (Phia); Rilke’s writings, Duino Elegies, Ewald Tragö, Notebooks of Make Laurids Brigge, The; Rodin, Auguste

Mourning: Freud on, 162; Klein on, 163–64; comparison of Freud’s ideas on responses to death with Rilke’s, 161–62

Mutter, Richard, 23

Narcissism, 5, 11, 210–12, 234; and creativity, 10, 217, 235–36; and egocentrism, 101; in emotional illness, 8, 10; grandiosity, 77, 79, 97–98, 102, 104, 195, 210; infantile, 171; narcissist’s ideal fantasy of self-realization, 166; narcissistic illness, 172–73, 212; and omnipotence, 172, 232; narcissistic perfection, 172, 234; in Rilke’s fantasy of a perfect companion, 64; and self-sufficiency in isolation, 185; in sublimation, 235; and symbiotic relation of mother and infant, 232. See also Mother; Omnipotence; Rilke, Sophie (Phia)

Narcissus, 32, 126; in “Narcissus” (2 poems), 212–13; in Sonnet II, 3, 126

Nature, relationship with, 215, 226, 228–39. See also Knoop, Vera

Nevar, Ely a Maria (Elsa Hotop), 243

“Nonface, the” (“Das Nichtgesicht”), 27–28, 30

Oedipal feelings, 10–11, 81–84; attachment, 158; conflict and hostility, 111, 118, 195; sexual competitiveness in “David Sings before Saul,” 139, 206–8; in The Notebooks, 145–46

Omnipotence, 8, 177, 231; creation of omnipotent parent, 172–73, 175, 232; and ego ideal, 234; and narcissistic fantasy of self-sufficiency, 185. See also Narcissism

“Open, the” (“Das Offne”), 6, 228, 240

Orpheus, 221–23, 229

Otrepyov, Grishka (False Czar Dmitri), in The Notebooks, 86–87

Outcasts, 59–60, 62, 83

Perfect companion, Rilke’s conception of, 63–64, 66, 209, 240

Petzet, Heinrich W., 122

Picasso, Pablo, 2, 4, 46

Pineles, Friedrich (“Zemek”), 91

Plato, “The Symposium,” 233

Poet’s relation to the world, 6

Prater, Donald, 11, 155–56, 161

Pre-oedipal psychology, 11, 131, 134

Projection, 45, 106, 139, 163, 214, 243; in the creation of gods, 195; in “David Sings before Saul,” 207; of idealized parental figures, 172–73, 75; in relationship with Rodin, 172, 175, 185, 186; of sister-self, 216–17

Psychoanalysis: classical analysis, 10, 131, 178, 195; oedipal paradigm in psychoanalytic theory, 10–11, 66, 131, 139; Rilke’s attitudes toward, 40–41, 43–44, 106; psychoanalytic therapy, 188. See also Balint, Alice; Balint, Michael; Chodorow, Nancy J.; Contratto, Susan; Ehrenzweig, Anton; Freud, Sigmund; Gebsattel, Victor Emil von; Greenacre, Phyllis; Klein, Melanie; Kohut, Heinz; Laing, R. D.; Meissner, W. W.; Modell, Arnold H.; Schafer, Roy; Searles, Harold F.; Simenauer, Erich; Winnicott, D. W.

Reaction formation, 11, 81–82, 131–33
Repression, 11, 77, 82, 133, 188; of idealized parent imago, 174

Rilke, Clara. See Rilke-Westhoff, Clara

Rilke, Jaroslav, Ritter von Ruliken, 24, 58, 81

Rilke, Josef, 7–8, 131–64, 167; as an anti-model, 154; anxiety about son, 86, 132, 134, 137, 153; aspirations for René, 57–58, 143, 169, 173; attempts to reassure him about son’s vocation, 155–56; and the bourgeoisie, 153–54; capacity for love (conflicting views), 131–34, 154; constriction, 7, 131; conventionality, 131, 152, 173; death of, 156–64, 187–88; failures of, 7, 152, 173, 201; images of as a young hero, 143–44; military career, 7, 173; old age, 208; opposition to son’s vocation, 131, 136–37; in “Portrait of My Father as a Youth,” 160; Rilke’s ambivalence about, 7–8, 131, 134, 137, 152, 208; Rilke’s childhood fear of his death, 161–62; Rilke’s identification with, 132, 133, 151–52, 157, 162–63, 169–70; Rilke’s redemption and restoration of, 157–58, 161, 186, 191; Rilke’s sense of affinity with, 154, 161. See also Father

Rilke, Ruth, 7, 24, 113–14, 116, 121, 129, 220

Rilke, Sophie (Phia), 7, 9, 113, 147, 148, 158, 192, 234; “connected with nothing,” 68, 72, 104–5; defenses against, 108; destructiveness of, 65, 69–70, 107, 211; desire to identify René with herself, 77, 211; emptiness, 71, 77; encouraged René to write poetry, 57, 79, 168; ideal image of son, 79; lacked empathy, 174; loss of, 218–19; narcissistic blindness 7, 65, 69–70, 73, 101, 107, 173, 211; Rilke’s ambivalence about, 73, 81–82; Rilke’s enmeshment with, 133; saw her son in terms of her own preconceptions, 7, 56–57, 69; self-deceptiveness, 7, 58, 153, 171; separation from family, 154, 173, 181, 212; treated René as a girl, 56–57, 71, 75–77, 83, 169, 242; unreality of, 57, 68, 75, 77, 105, 171, 173

INDEX 273

Rilke-Westhoff, Clara, 8, 24, 66, 91, 103, 110–30, 147, 153, 201, 241; character of marriage, 120–30, 167; decline of friendship with Rilke, 128–29; as a letter writer, 122–23; as Mädchen, 111–13; maternal role with Rilke, 116; and “mirroring,” 125–28; narrative gift, 111; as perfect collaborator, 127; and Rilke’s distaste for possessive love, 117; and Rilke’s feelings about sculptors, 118–20; Rilke’s letters to her, 122–24; and Rilke’s need for mastery, 117, 123–24, 128; her sculpture, 118, 120, 126, 201; strength of character, 118; studied with Rodin, 111, 165; as unwelcome visitor, 129

Rodin, Auguste, 3, 7, 8, 18, 23, 25, 30, 79, 82, 103, 122, 151, 156, 165–209, 237; ambivalence toward, 191, 208; associated with Creator in Genesis, 166; associated with “an eastern god,” 166; break with, 186, 191, 192; capacity for mothering himself, 183; center of his own world, 166; changes in the relationship, 188, 193, 194, 197, 200; conferred reality and certainty on things, 173; connection with the world, 118, 181; death of, 201; and “David Sings before Saul,” 203–8; decay and decline, 197–201, 206; disintegrative and reintegrating sculpture, 36; fantasy of a dangerous, destructive master, 198–200; emphasis on constant labor, as against inspiration, 169–70; idealization of, 157, 166–69,
INDEX

171, 191, 192; identification with, 177, 191; influence of, on Rilke's art, 165, 170–71, 177, 201; as "master," 177–78, 183, 191, 201; mastering the master, 177, 184, 206; as a maternal figure, 168, 171, 192; as model, 167–69, 171, 184, 201, 196; negative effects on Rilke, 178–79; reconciliation with, 192–93; retrospective view, 201–3; Rilke on Rodin's art, 178–79; Rilke's dependence on, 180; Rilke's secretarial labors for, 180, 186–87, 199; Rilke's vision of, 182; as second father, 145, 165, 168–70, 177, 187, 190–92, 201, 208; as "shelter," 167–68; as "very near tower," 167; transference relationship with, 157, 171, 174–77, 186–88; ultimate effects on Rilke, 191; view of women contrasted with Rilke's, 196; way of working, 177

Salis, Jean Rudolph von, 52
Satiric irony in Rilke's writings, 146–47, 149, 159
Scapegoat, Malte Laurids Brigge as, 44
Schafer, Roy, 163, 169
Schiller, Friedrich von, 57, 79
Schizophrenia, 2, 37, 60, 61, 72, 83–84; origins of, 83; paranoid schizophrenia, 39; schizophrenic art and language, 2, 11; self-destructiveness of schizophrenic, 45
Schopenhauer, Arthur, 115
Schwarz, Egon, 22
Searles, Harold F., 4, 7, 32–34, 37, 78, 82–83, 85, 134
Self-love and self-esteem, 97, 194; confirmation in childhood, 168
"Self-object," as defined by Kohut, 174
Sense of self, 11, 154; dread of loss of self, 78; healthy social self, 60–61; inner self 56, 61; mental and emotional equilibrium, 174; and "mirroring," 32; self-division, 190; sense of reality, cohesion, and identity, 32, 72, 174–75; sense of individuality and separateness, 156, 159; solipsistic state of mind, 32; threat of annihilation, 78, 148, 174, 182. See also Body image
Sense of self in Rilke, 3, 5, 53, 55, 151, 193; fear of annihilation, 71, 113, 182; "intermediate space" between himself and others, 54–55, 62; longing for "Wirklichkeitsgefühl," 96, 130; long-term transformation, 241; self-division, 171–72, 177–78; and social personas, 5, 55, 62, 152; alienation, 3; autonomy, 3; sense of his own "sickness," 212; formlessness, 107; identity, 3, 50, 191; importance as an artist, 178, 183; individuality and separateness, 65; inner self, 34, 56, 60; mastery and self-mastery, 191; personal unity and integration in his poems, 243; sense of reality and cohesion, 77, 105, 168; sexual identity, 76, 169, 243; sense of his own unique genius and artistic independence, 193; sense of unreality of self and world, 95, 105–6, 108, 171, 177–79, 183
Shakespeare, William: Hamlet, 107–8; King Lear, 107; Two Gentlemen of Verona, 178
Shaw, George Bernard, 198
Shaw, Priscilla W., 28
Sieber, Carl, 59, 81, 136, 141, 147–49, 170
Simenauer, Erich, 10–11, 13, 16, 131, 133–34, 139, 158, 193
Simmel, Georg, 13
Sister, 9, 75, 216–17; Rilke as substitute for, 9, 75–76, 217, 231, 242–43; in "From a Stormy Night," 216; and the Sophie game in The Notebooks, 75–76, 216, 231, 242. See also Woman (or girl) within Sizzo, Countess Margot, 133, 162
Sokel, Walter H., 49
Solitude, 63–64, 66, 190, 194, 220, 237–38, 240; negative consequences, 184. See also Creativity; Isolation
Spitz, Rene A., 31, 33
Splitting and polarization, 157–58; of the father, 107–8, 160; of the mother, 107–8. See also Isolation
Steiner, Jacob, 13–15
Stephens, Anthony, 14, 16–17
Stüpa, Ingrid, 14–16
INDEX 275

Sublimation, 99, 162
Superego, 131, 140, 194. See also Angels;
Ego ideal
Symbiotic relationship of mother and child, 74, 78, 82, 85, 135, 211, 231; and “The Unfinished Elegy,” 217; and The Sonnets, 231
Symbolists, 20

“Things,” 11, 159
“Those who have died young,” 218. See also Knoop, Vera

Thurn und Taxis, Princess Marie von, 64,
66, 70, 79, 90, 209, 240–41

Tolstoy, Count Leo, 41–43, 103, 202

Transference, 81–83, 102, 106, 157–58;
“idealizing transference,” 106; “mirror transference,” 96–97; of rage from Ma-man to Herr Brigge in The Notebooks,
146; in the relationship with Rodin, 171,
173–77, 188; and transitional objects,
181

Transformation in Rilke’s writings, 11, 17,
215, 221, 224, 241; in the Ninth Elegy,
158–59, 225, 232, 236

Transitional objects, 176, 181–82, 184–85

Traumatic disappointment, 173–74

True self, 56–57, 60–62, 190. See also False self; Schizoid illness

Unconscious mental processes, 27. See also “Invisible, the”

Undifferentiated, unintegrated condition,
9, 239

Undoing, 155–56, 186, 188, 194

Unintegrated condition, 9

Unrequited love, 196–97, 218, 230

Valéry, Paul, 238; “L’âme et la danse,” 224

Van Gogh, 41

Vogeler, Heinrich, 24, 103

Wassermann, Jakob, 90

“Weltinnenraum,” 17

Whitman, Walt, “Song of Myself,” 233

Winnicott, D. W., 5–7, 9, 33, 50, 54, 56,
60–62, 168, 180–81, 238, 240, 242–44

Wolff, Kurt, 90

Woman (or girl) within, 209–44; in The
Notebooks, 216; in the Ninth Elegy,
236; in the Seventh Elegy, 225, 232, 235,
237; in The Sonnets, 219–26, 230–32,
235, 237–38, 241–44; in “The Unfinished Elegy,” 217; in “Wendung”
See also Knoop, Vera

Woman’s awareness, 228

Women in love, 196–97, 218; man’s comparative inability to love, 154, 196–97

Worpswede colony, 24

Wunderly-Volkart, Nanny, 79
PRAISE FOR THE BOOK

“[A] well-reasoned, fairly fascinating, and illuminating study which soundly and convincingly applies Freudian, and particularly post-Freudian insights into the self, to Rilke’s life and work, in a way which enlightens us considerably. ... Kleinbard succeeds in giving us a psychic portrait of the poet which is more illuminating and which... does greater justice to its subject than any of his predecessors.”

— Walter H. Sokel, Commonwealth Professor of German and English Literatures, University of Virginia

“The insights here are of such depth, and contain such beauty in them, that time and again the reader must pause for breath. At last Rilke has met a critic whose insight, courage, and humanity are worthy of his life and work.”

— Leslie Epstein, Director, Graduate Creative Writing Program, Boston University

“An elegant weave of biography, textual analysis, and psychoanalytic interpretation. Unlike many literary critics, Kleinbard is fluent in the modern Anglo-American psychoanalytic tradition and employs the works of Searles, Kohut, Winnicott and others not to reduce but to enrich our readings of Rilke’s great aesthetic achievements. A wonderful work of scholarship.”

— George J. Makari, M.D., Executive Secretary, History of Psychiatry Section, Payne Whitney Clinic, Cornell University Medical College

Beginning with Rilke’s novel The Notebooks of Malte Laurids Brigge, published in 1910, David Kleinbard examines the ways in which the poet mastered the illness that is so frightening and crippling in Malte and made the illness a resource for his art. Kleinbard focuses on Rilke’s poetry, letters, and nonfiction prose, his childhood, marriage, relations with Rodin and Lou Andreas-Salomé, and the relationship between illness and genius, a subject to which Rilke returned again and again.

Literature and Psychoanalysis / General Editor: Jeffrey Berman

DAVID KLEINBARD is Professor of English and Comparative Literature at Queens College and the Graduate Center, CUNY. His published work ranges from psychological studies of D. H. Lawrence and Faulkner, to essays on contemporary German and American poetry, and original fiction.

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY PRESS
Washington Square
New York, NY 10003