HIV Mental Health for the 21st Century

Winiarski, Mark G.

Published by NYU Press

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/15730

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=499532
Contributors

David D. Barney, M.S.W., is the research and evaluation specialist at the National Native American AIDS Prevention Center, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. He received his master’s in social work from San Diego State University and is studying public health at the University of California, Berkeley.

Robert L. Barret, Ph.D., is professor of counselor education at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. Active in HIV-related psychotherapy for eleven years, he is a member of the senior faculty of the American Psychological Association’s Project HOPE, a federally funded train-the-trainer program for HIV mental health services. He has a private practice in Charlotte and is the coauthor of Gay Fathers.

Rebecca Bathon, M.S.W., is the coordinator of the Helena Hatch Special Care Center for women with HIV in the St. Louis, Missouri, metropolitan area. She is a former Ryan White C.A.R.E. Act services coordinator.

G. Stephen Bowen, M.D., M.P.H., retired from government service in 1996 after serving most recently as director of the Bureau of Health Resources Development and associate administrator for AIDS of the Health Resources and Services Administration. He was an assistant surgeon general. Until his retirement, the Ryan White C.A.R.E. Act was administered under his leadership.

Martha Ann Carey, Ph.D., R.N., is an evaluation specialist with the Center for Mental Health Services, Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, U.S. Public Health Service. In addition to HIV and mental health, her research interests include the development of research methodology for social science programs. She is currently the program director for the Employment Intervention Demonstration Program for persons with severe mental illness.

Pascal Conforti, O.S.U., M.A., is director of pastoral services at the Spellman Center, a division of St. Clare’s Hospital and Health Center, New York, New York. She works directly with HIV-infected patients and their loved ones as well as with professional and volunteer caregivers in the areas of self-care, spirituality, pastoral education, and care of the terminally ill and dying. An Ursuline sister, she is a certified member of the National Association of Catholic Chaplains.

Betty E. S. Duran, M.S.W., is director of the Direct Client Services Division of the National Native American AIDS Prevention Center in Oklahoma City. She is a tribal member of Pojoaque Pueblo in northern New Mexico and was the first female appointed to an all-male pueblo tribal council, in which she retains lifetime membership. Tribal offices held by Ms. Duran include tribal secretary, treasurer, and governor of Pojoaque Pueblo. She has a master's degree in social work from the University of Kansas.

Noel Elia, M.S.W., is a social worker with the AIDS Mental Health and Primary Care Integration Project, Montefiore Medical Center, Bronx, New York. She also is a lecturer and trainer regarding substance abuse, AIDS, and grief and loss.

Thomas Eversole, M.S., serves as training director for the American Psychological Association's Office on AIDS. He is an active trainer and curriculum developer in the areas of mental health services for HIV/AIDS, substance abuse, sexual minority youth, and cultural diversity, and works with the Community Mobilization for HIV/Substance Abuse Prevention.

Dennee Frey, Pharm.D., was project director of AIDS Psychiatric Homecare at the Visiting Nurse Association of Los Angeles, Inc. She currently is coinvestigator of a Vanderbilt University project titled "Improving Pharmacotherapy in Home Health Patients."

Barbara C. Kwasnik, M.S.W, is manager of psychiatric outpatient services at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center, Paterson, New Jersey. Her professional experience includes program planning, administration, and thirteen years of clinical work in the emergency room and at a mental health clinic where she worked with inner-city children, adults, and families with multiple problems, including HIV, chronic illness, sexual abuse, posttraumatic stress disorder, and the dual diagnosis of mental illness and chemical abuse.
Karen Meredith, M.P.H., R.N., is an instructor in medicine at the Washington University School of Medicine and director of the Helena Hatch Special Care Center for women with HIV/AIDS in the St. Louis, Missouri, metropolitan area. She has been involved in local and national HIV prevention and care efforts since the beginning of the epidemic.

Rosemary T. Moynihan, S.C., Ph.D., is supervisor of the mental health program of the Comprehensive Care Center for HIV at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center, Paterson, New Jersey. She has thirty-six years' experience working with adults, children, and families around issues of chronic fatal illness, including cancer and HIV, and with people who are multiply diagnosed with emotional disturbance, chemical addiction, and catastrophic illness. She has a master's in social work from Columbia University and a Ph.D. in clinical social work from New York University.

Michael Mulvihill, Dr.P.H., is the director of the Research Division, Department of Family Medicine, Albert Einstein College of Medicine/Montefiore Medical Center, Bronx, New York. His doctorate in public health with a concentration in epidemiology is from Columbia University, and he is an expert in health services research.

Michele Killough Nelson, Ph.D., is a clinical psychologist and director of the Mini Mental Health Clinic for HIV-infected and -affected individuals at the Medical College of Virginia/Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond, Virginia. She is an assistant professor of psychiatry and teaches courses on working with dying individuals, AIDS Dementia Complex, psychological assessment, and borderline personality disorder. She writes on these topics and on working with transplant patients.

Karen Oman, S.W, was project coordinator of AIDS Psychiatric Homecare at the Visiting Nurse Association of Los Angeles, Inc. She currently is bereavement coordinator for the association's Hospice Program.

Kathy Parish, Ph.D., is a psychologist and site principal investigator of the Hemophilia Behavioral Intervention Evaluation Project at Huntington Memorial Hospital, Pasadena, California, in a cooperative agreement with the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. She also has a private consulting practice.
Marjorie H. Royle, Ph.D., is the research and evaluation coordinator for the Department of Psychiatry at St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center, Paterson, New Jersey. She received her Ph.D. in applied social psychology from Claremont Graduate School, Claremont, California, and has done evaluation research for the U.S. Navy and the United Church of Christ.

Ariel Shidlo, Ph.D., is a clinical/community psychologist and program director for TalkSafe, a peer counseling program for HIV-negative gay and bisexual men at St. Vincent's Hospital and Medical Center, New York City. He is also on staff as a psychologist at the Columbia Center for Lesbian, Gay & Bisexual Mental Health, New York City.

I. Michael Shuff, Ph.D., is associate professor of counseling psychology at Indiana State University, Terre Haute. He is director of the Heartland Care Center, a state-supported HIV/AIDS care center located on the university campus, which serves a five-county area in western Indiana. His professional experience with HIV/AIDS spans the past decade.

Karina K. Uldall, M.D., M.P.H., is a psychiatrist at the University of Washington, Seattle, and principal investigator for the Special Projects of National Significance project “Management of Delirium in HIV/AIDS Patients,” which educates providers and families about neuropsychiatric aspects of HIV/AIDS. She also worked on an earlier SPNS project at the Department of Public Health, Seattle, that facilitated integration of psychiatry into primary care practice at Harborview's Madison Clinic.

William R. Wagner, M.S.W, has been a field social worker for the Visiting Nurse Association of Los Angeles Hospice Program.

Dottie Ward-Wimmer, R.N., is a pediatric nurse and director of the children's program at the St. Francis Center, Washington, D.C. She helped establish the Immunology Service at Children's National Medical Center, Washington, D.C., and has published and taught about issues of loss, life-threatening illness, transition, violence, and abuse. She has testified before two presidential commissions on the impact of HIV/AIDS on children. She also is a certified professional counselor and a registered play therapist and has a private practice.

Mark G. Winiarski, Ph.D., is the clinical director of the AIDS Mental Health and Primary Care Integration Project at Montefiore Medical Center, Bronx, New York. He also is principal investigator for an AIDS Mental Health Training Project funded by the Ittleson Foundation and the van Ameringen Foundation. He is an assistant professor of family medicine and psychiatry at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, Bronx, New York, and was a senior faculty member of the American Psychological Association's Project HOPE. He is the author of AIDS-Related Psychotherapy.

Douglas A. Wirth, M.S.W., is senior public policy analyst, community organizer, AIDS mental health coordinator, and director of government relations for the Coalition of Voluntary Mental Health Agencies of New York City. He recently coordinated the Community Mental Health Reinvestment campaign for major mental health reform in New York State. Mr. Wirth served as senior faculty with the American Psychological Association's Project HOPE and as associate director of Tamanawit Unlimited, a consulting firm in Seattle, Washington.