Big Water
Blanc, Jacob, Freitas, Frederico, Frank, Zephyr

Published by University of Arizona Press

Blanc, Jacob, et al.
Big Water: The Making of the Borderlands Between Brazil, Argentina, and Paraguay.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/57569

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=2073824
Shawn Michael Austin holds a PhD in Latin American history from the University of New Mexico (2014). He is an assistant professor of history at the University of Arkansas. He has published in the Colonial Latin American Review and Revista Paraguaya de Sociología.

Jacob Blanc holds a PhD from the University of Wisconsin–Madison (2017) and is a lecturer in Latin American history at the University of Edinburgh. His work has been published in the Journal of Latin American Studies, the Journal of Peasant Studies and the Luso-Brazilian Review.

Bridget María Chesterton holds a PhD from Stony Brook University (2007) and is a professor of history at Buffalo State. Her book The Grandchildren of Solano López: Frontier and Nation in Paraguay, 1904–1936 was published by the University of New Mexico Press (2013). She has coedited the volume Transformations of Populism in Europe and the Americas: History and Recent Tendencies (Bloomsbury Academic Publishing, 2015) and edited The Chaco War: Environment, Ethnicity, and Nationalism (Bloomsbury Academic Publishing, 2016).

Christine Folch earned a PhD in cultural anthropology at the City University of New York. She is assistant professor of anthropology at Duke University, where she is also co-director of the Global Brazil Lab at the Franklin Humanities Institute. She has published in the Journal of Latin American and Caribbean Zephyr Frank is Gildred Professor of Latin American Studies and the director of both the Spatial History Project and the Program of Urban Studies at Stanford University. Among other books, he has written Reading Rio de Janeiro: Literature and Society in the Nineteenth Century (Stanford University Press, 2016).

Frederico Freitas holds a PhD in Latin American history from Stanford University (2016). He is an assistant professor of Latin American and digital history at North Carolina State University and an investigator at the Visual Narrative Initiative. His work has appeared in HIb: Revista de Historia Iberoamericana.

Michael Kenneth Huner received his PhD in history from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill (2011). He is an assistant professor of history at Grand Valley State University. His work has appeared in Building Nineteenth-Century Latin America: Re-rooted Cultures, Identities, and Nations and A Contracorriente.

Eunice Sueli Nodari received a PhD in history from the Pontificia Universidade Catolica do Rio Grande do Sul (1999). She is a full professor at the Universidade Federal de Santa Catarina, Brazil. She has published in specialized journals, edited collections, book chapters, and book monographs on nature and society in southern Brazil. Nodari is a leading environmental historian in Latin America.

Evaldo Mendes da Silva holds a PhD in anthropology from the Museu Nacional/Universidade Federal do Rio de Janeiro. He is a professor in the Programa de Pós-Graduação em Antropologia Social at the Instituto de Ciências Sociais at the Universidade Federal de Alagoas and, in 2017–2018, a visiting scholar in the department of anthropology at the University of British Columbia. He is the author of numerous books and articles on the Guarani Indians and the Triple Frontier.

Graciela Silvestri holds a PhD in history (1997) from the Universidad de Buenos Aires, where she also previously got her degree as an architect (1980). She is a professor of architectural theory at the Universidad Nacional de La Plata in Argentina and a senior researcher at CONICET (Consejo Nacional de Investigaciones Científicas y Tecnológicas). She has held visiting professorships at Harvard University, the University of Cambridge, and the Universitat Politècnica de Catalunya, among other institutions. She is a leading author in the history of the Paraná region.

Guillermo Wilde received his PhD in social anthropology from the Universidad de Buenos Aires (2003). He teaches at the Universidad Nacional de San Martin and is a full researcher at the National Scientific Research Council of Argentina (CONICET). His book Religion y Poder en las misiones guaraníes (2009) won the LASA Premio Iberoamericano Award (2010). He has published numerous articles and book chapters on indigenous history, Jesuit missions, and colonial music and art.
