Writing the New World

Caraccioli, Mauro José

Published by University Press of Florida

Caraccioli, Mauro José.
Writing the New World: The Politics of Natural History in the Early Spanish Empire.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/84123.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/84123

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=2908729
INDEX

Page numbers in italics refer to illustrations; the letter t refers to tables.

An Account, Much Abbreviated, of the Destruction of the Indies (Las Casas): audience of, 55; criticisms of, 58; epigraph quotations, 39; epistemology of, 57; ethnographic qualities, 56, 156n37; eyewitness accounts, 57–58; future orientation, 55; ideological contexts, 47, 156n37; impact of, 19, 55; on indigenous peoples, 53–55, 58–60, 159n70; mentioned, 24; as naturalist epic, 56–60, 138; overview of, 40–41, 53; rhetorical style, 58; on Spain’s moral duties, 60; utopianism, 53–54, 56, 59; wonder in, 60

Acosta, José de: Bacon, influence on, 123; the demonic, fear of, 2; education, 110; and empire, histories of, 124; empiricism of, 112, 118, 121–22, 124; expedition purposes, 32, 110; goals of, 102; Hernández’s influence on, 102; as humanist scholar, 111, 133, 136; and imperialism, 123–24; and indigenous peoples, 2, 124, 125, 153n32; influence of, 105–7; Jesuit duties, 110; judgment, conception of, 104, 106, 120; versus Las Casas, 104, 109, 112, 124; legacy of, 124, 126, 136; Locke, influence on, 82, 106–7, 113, 120, 165n15; as missionary, 115–16, 136, 138; natural history approach, 104–5, 108, 117, 124; nature and local knowledge, 123; nature’s mechanics, search for, 168n50; Old World ideas, questioning of, 31, 110–11, 124; versus Oviedo, 112; in Peru, 1–2, 110; political ambiguity, 136–37; popularity of, 115; as rational-religious bridge, 105; and Sahagún, 82, 104; Scholasticism, challenges to, 31, 110–11; and the Scientific Revolution, 138; and the Spanish Crown, 110; and theology, 112, 114–15, 120–21, 138

Acosta, José de, natural philosophy of: and Christianity, 102; development of, 138; divine order in, 114; influence of, 105–6; in Natural and Moral History of the Indies, 34, 109–10; and natural history, 112; versus Scholasticism, 31–34; and theology, 114

Acosta, José de, writings of: distribution of, 121–22; and imperial science, 34; influence of, 105–6; on minerals, 32; misappropriations of, 106–7; missionary field manual, 32; naturalist dissonance in, 33–34; and New World conquest, 120; Pagden’s use of, 46; practical philosophy and domination, 22; reception of, 105. See also Natural and Moral History of the Indies

Adorno, Rolena, 14, 25
Alcalá University, 89–91, 95, 110
Altepe, 79
Ammon, Laura, 67, 72
Antigrand narratives, 87, 100
Arias, Santa, 55
Armitage, David, 155n30
Arneil, Barbara, 106–7
Ausubel, Kenny, 132–33

Bacon, Francis: Acosta’s influence on, 82, 106, 122, 165n15; and Imperial Spain’s empiricism, 19; and New World encounters, 123; on the Spanish Empire, 122–23, 167n47; “torturing nature’s secrets” phrase, 166n17
Barkawi, Tarak, 154n16
Barrera-Osorio, Antonio: on Acosta, 33, 119, 121; on early modernity, 20; on empiricism, 156n40; on Enlightenment historiography, 156n34; on Hernández, 33
Bentancor, Orlando, 5, 149n20
Black Legend narratives, 53, 114, 123
Brevisima relación de la destrucción de las Indias. See An Account, Much Abbreviated, of the Destruction of the Indies
Bureaucracy, colonial, 95, 97
Cañizares-Esguerra, Jorge: on Acosta, 31, 112, 114, 124, 138; on Enlightenment historiography, 156n34; on epic poetry, 151n49; on Hernández’s expedition, 86; on Iberian reputations, 48; on Las Casas, 58–59; on missionaries and the Devil, 74; on naturalism and imperialism, 73; on New World historiography, 9, 147n5; on Spain’s reputation, 19–20
Carey, Mark, 143n10
Carr, David, 16
Cervantes, Fernando, 70–71
Chapter overviews, 11–12
Charles V, 19, 49
Chivalric epics: versus natural history, 21–22; Oviedo’s, 48–49, 158n41; of La Reconquista, 21, 26–27; religious overtones, 27, 151n49
Cicero, 109
Civilizational narratives: and indigenous peoples, 46, 61; Las Casas and, 62; modern, 139; natural history as, 14; nature in, 120; New World, 133–34
Clark, Stuart, 4
Classical texts and thought: at Alcalá, 89–91; challenges to, 104–5, 117–18; indigenous peoples challenging, 73; and nature, 31; Nebrija’s influence on, 89; New World applicability, 15, 34, 66, 124; reevaluations of, 90
Climate change, 6, 132–33, 140–41, 144n18
Cobo, Bernabé, 102, 108
Colonization, African versus New World, 45
Comparative ethnology, 46–47
Comparative systems, cultural, 28
Composite states, 18
Conquest narratives, 24–28, 66
Coronil, Fernando, 141
Cosmographers, 31, 111, 114, 156n34
Cronon, William, 17, 147n5
Cruz, Juana Inés de la, 127
Cult of St. Anne, 78–79
Data collection, 30, 32, 35, 98, 127
Debate at Valladolid, 55, 60–61, 159n74
Demonology: as anthropology, 27–30, 73–75; and millenarianism, 74; and missionary training, 90; and the natural environment, 27; political, 64; thinking with, 4
Descartes, 158n67
The Devil and diabolism: Acosta’s fear of, 2; in Acosta’s writings, 2, 109, 116; indigenous appropriations of, 71; indigenous views of, 70; and landscapes, 75; missionaries and, 74
Dioscorides, 90–91
Domination, 5–6, 17, 22
Dryzek, John, 7
Eamon, William, 39
Early modern period: emergence of, 128; epistemologies of, 114; intellectual changes, 20–21; the New World, images of, 20; political theory, 2–4; science in, 33, 128–29, 131; Spanish thinkers, 81–82
Elliot, John H., 18
Empire: as cultivation ideology, 37; definitions of, 154n16; and faith, 120; formalization of, 21; and liberalism, 43–44; and nature, 41, 120, 153n8; and science, 6, 120; and Spanish naturalism, 61; term meaning changes, 45
Empire, political theory of: and globalization, 42–43; historical contexts, 42–43; history of, 7; and history of science, 60–61; intellectual contexts, 42; and liberalism, 7–8, 43–44, 154n19; nature in, 40; and the social status quo, 43; the Spanish, 44–45, 154n25; and Spanish America, 42; turn towards, 8
Empiricism: Acosta’s, 112, 118, 121–22, 124; and early modern science, 128; of imperial explorers, 114; institutionalization of, 156n40; and New World encounters, 48
Enlightenment: French, 27–28; Hispanic, 10; historiography of, 156n34; Scottish, 27–28, 44; Spanish contributions to, 40, 119, 139
Environmental destruction, 129
Environments, natural. See Nature
Epic poetry. See Chivalric epics
Epistle to Arias Montano (Hernández): English translation, 162n2; expedition goals, 99–100; expedition laments, 92–96; overview of, 84, 92–93
Escobar, Arturo, 141
Ethnography: Acosta and, 112; exploration as authority, 56; Las Casas and, 56, 125, 156n37; natural history, role in, 27; Sahagún’s, 28–29, 63–64, 81, 135

Exploration, debates over, 138–39

Faith and naturalism, 61

Farr, James, 3

Fleischner, Thomas, 137

Florentine Codex (Sahagún): on Ahuizotls, 63, 68; as anthropological demonology, 82; bird of the heart, 76–79; Book XI overview, 67, 75; contexts of, 64, 72, 80; Cult of St. Anne, 78–79; diabolism in, 73–75, 80; ethnographic approach, 81, 135; history of, 69; in the history of political thought, 65; idolatry, approach to, 78–81; imperial agenda of, 29; inconsistencies in, 65; indigenous cultures and peoples in, 64–65, 67, 72, 160n19, 170n20; indigenous knowledge in, 29, 63, 69, 75; innovations of, 81; and intellectual historiography, 65; interlingualism of, 68, 69, 75, 77–80; and interlingual relations, 75, 79–83; land, concepts of, 79; millenarianism of, 72; missionary strategies, 71; nature and religion, 79–81; and nature, attitudes toward, 80; obscurity of, 67, 69; overview of, 28, 64; scholarly attention to, 67, 69; Toci myth, 76, 78–79; as values mediation, 75; yoliá, 76–78

Foucault, Michel, 82, 130

Franciscan Order: and diabolism, 70–71, 73; and the Florentine Codex, 69; millenarianism of, 74; missionaries, 69–71, 73–74, 76

Fuchs, Barbara, 157n47

Fuentes, Carlos, 10, 137

Fuerst, James, 5, 149n20

Furst, Jill McKeever, 76

Gaukroger, Stephen, 123

Gerbi, Antonello, 52–53, 146n12, 157n43

Gimmel, Millie, 75, 79

Great Book, nature as, 22, 23f, 33–34, 116

Greenblatt, Stephen, 47

Hanke, Lewis, 10

Hardt, Michael, 154n16

Heidegger, Martin, 17

Hernández, Francisco: and ancient sources, 90–91, 163n23; birth, 88; career trajectory, 84–86, 101; data collection, 32; detractors, 32–33, 95, 98; drawings of, 94; education, 89, 163n23; epigraph quotations, 84; the Hernández Affair, 85–86, 100–101; humanist optimism of, 91–92; and humanist philology, 85–86; and imperial science, 86; and indigenous knowledge, 99; influence, medical, 92; and Judaism, 93, 163n21; medical interests, 99, 133, 135; mentioned, 15–16, 35; natural philosophy of, 33–34, 138; nature, interpretation of, 116; and nature-society interaction, 101; the New World, views of, 99; and Philip II, 91, 93, 97–99; political ambiguity, 136–37; and the Renaissance, 99; Sahagún’s influence on, 82; scholarship on, 99; scientific authorities, relationship with, 86; and Spanish naturalists, 87–88; success of, 88

Hernández, Francisco, botanical expedition: classification model developed, 86; and colonization, 101; data and sample collection, 32, 98; difficulties faced, 92–97; as failure, 92, 97–98; goals of, 99–100; and humanism, 101; impact of, 85–86, 98–99; imperial sanction of, 93, 98–99; medicinal information, 86; and narrative politics, 91, 100; opposition to, 32–33, 98; overview of, 86; political contexts, 99; purposes of, 91, 93; resource lacks, 95, 97; social environment, 97; as success, 135–36. See also Epistle to Arias Montano

Hernández, Francisco, writings of: botanical descriptions, 96; goals of, 31; and imperial power, 32; and imperial science, 34; influence of, 92, 102, 165n46; manuscripts, journey of, 98–101; naturalist dissonance in, 33–34; practical philosophy and domination, 22; publication of, 32, 85, 92, 163n17; rediscovery of, 102; scope of, 85; survival of, 135–36; translations, 85, 162n2. See also Epistle to Arias Montano

Historia Natural. See Natural and Moral History of the Indies

Historical International Relations, 45

Historical stages typologies, 28

Historiography: Enlightenment, 156n34; intellectual, 65; New World, 9, 45, 81, 115, 147n5; politics of, 130–34

History and social progress theory, 27–28

Hobbes, Thomas, 3

Hoffman, Stanley, 44

Honig, Bonnie, 7

Hooker, Juliet, 5, 144n13

Humanism: Hernández and, 85–86, 91–92, 101; Jesuit, 111, 115, 133, 136; Las Casas and, 144n13; and narrative politics, 89–90; in the Spanish Empire, 88–89
Humanists, Spanish, 90–91, 93
Humboldt, Alexander von, 19, 34, 113

Imagination, 134

Indigenous beliefs and knowledge: biases against, 64–65; importance to Spaniards, 30; Sahagún’s collection of, 29, 64, 69, 75; study of, changes in, 136; translation of, 72

Indigenous cultures and peoples: Acosta’s views of, 155n32; and civilization narratives, 46, 61; and demons, 2; and Devil figures, 70–71; dispossession of, 148n8; European views of, 46, 66–67, 155n31–32; in the Florentine Codex, 64–65, 67, 72, 160n19, 170n20; good-and-evil concepts, 71; Iberian traveler reliance on, 87; Las Casas and, 27, 53–55, 136n37, 155n32; missionary encounters, 67, 74; and natural man construction, 46; nature, relationship to, 61; and political theory, 65, 83; rituals, Christianized, 70–71; Sahagún’s views of, 28; savage critic trope, 155n31. See also Sahagún, Bernardino de, and indigenous peoples

Inquisition, 115

Interlingual relations, 75, 79–83, 162n49

International Relations (field), 45, 155n30, 161n28

Interpretation, 113, 116, 131, 140

Irving, Sarah, 122–23

Isabella, Queen, 89, 163n16

Jahn, Beate, 161n28

Jesuit Order. See Society of Jesus

Judgment: Acosta’s conception of, 104, 106, 120; developing, 121; Jesuit concepts of, 109; and nature, 34, 106

Keene, Edward, 45

Klein, Naomi, 132

Laffey, Mark, 154n16

Lafitau, Joseph-François, 108

de Landa, Diego, 29

Language: interlingual relations, 75, 79–83, 162n49; of the Spanish Empire, 22; study of, 89

Las Casas, Bartolomé de: versus Acosta, 104, 109, 112, 124; on barbarians, 155n32; and civilization narratives, 62; conquest, morality of, 135; conversion of, 57; versus Hernández, 91; as historian, 133; as humanist, 144n13; idealism support, 55, 158n57; and indigenous peoples, 27, 53–55, 136n37, 155n32; mentioned, 15; natural history, approach to, 58; natural law, 57; natural philosophy of, 41; nature, views of, 60, 116; New World, attitudes toward, 26, 98; Oviedo, rivalry with, 40–41, 49, 53, 157n43; political ambiguity, 136–37; and La Reconquista, 27; reputation of, 53; rhetorical description, 16; and utopianism, 158n56. See also Debate at Valladolid

Las Casas, Bartolomé de, writings of: Apologética historia, 25, 156n37; and conquest narratives, 24, 27–28; criticisms of, 58; ethical models in, 22; ethnographic qualities, 25; first-hand experience in, 56, 58; General and Natural History, 26; historical perspectives in, 58; ideological contexts, 47; indigenous peoples, 27; versus Las Casas’s, 25–26; nature and wonder, 46–47; nature in, 25, 40, 47; versus Oviedo’s, 25–26; Pagden’s use of, 46; personal experiences in, 55; on Spain’s responsibilities, 25; on Spanish atrocities, 19, 21. See also An Account, Much Abbreviated, of the Destruction of the Indies

Latin America: colonial, 65, 146n18; contemporary conflicts, 129; contemporary problems, 140; subaltern modes of thinking, 134; utopian literary genres, 35–36

León-Portilla, Miguel, 65

Liberalism, 7–8, 43–44, 154n19

Literary cultures, 106, 165n6

Locke, John: Acosta’s influence on, 82, 106–7, 113, 120, 165n5; on agriculture, 148n8; on the Americas’ place in history, 106; on New World life, 16

Manzo, Silvia, 167n47

Merrim, Stephanie, 48–49

Microhistories, 87

Mignolo, Walter, 114, 156n39, 168n50

Millenarianism, 37, 72, 74, 133

Miller, Shawn, 18–19

Miranda, Juan de, 18, 148n19

Missionaries: Augustinian view of the world, 67; challenges faced, 70; compromises made, 70; cultural accommodation, 73; as destructive, 28–29; and diabolism, 70–71, 82; Franciscan, 69–70, 73–74, 76; indigenous customs exposure, 74; indigenous peoples, views of, 67; Jesuit, 104, 110; and judgment, 121; and natural history, 73; and naturalist data, 29; training of, 90; and yolích, 76

Modernity and Spanish imperialism, 61–62, 134
Molina, Luis de, 18, 148n19
Monardes, Nicolas, 90–91, 98–99
Montano, Arias, 93
Montesinos, Antonio de, 57
Mosher, Michael, 154n25
Myers, Kathleen Ann, 24, 50, 153n5

Narrative politics, 87, 89–91, 100
Narratives: antigrand, 87, 100; of conquest, 24–28, 66; and ethics, 17; grand, 87, 99; of lived experiences, 16–17; of naturalist dissonance, 31–34; naturalizing empire, 21; normative power of, 131; and power, 11; theoretical paradigms of, 16–17, 147n5; travel, 26. See also Natural history of the New World, constitutive narratives of

Natural and Moral History of the Indies (Acosta): canonical readings of, 119–23; the Church, challenges to, 111–12, 116–17; demons and devils in, 2, 109, 116; empiricism of, 112, 118, 121–22; epigraph quotations, 126; on the equator, 103; ethnographic sensibilities, 112; European audience of, 107–8; frontispiece, 111; goals of, 107–8, 112–13, 118; historical contexts, 103–4, 113–16; impact of, 2, 113, 115, 124; and imperial political economy, 119; influence of, 31; interpretive contexts, 121; interpretive methodology, 104, 113, 116; as moral history, 115–16; narrative approach, 113; narrative dissonance in, 105, 113, 117, 124; natural phenomenon analyses, 116–18; natural philosophy of, 34, 109–10; nature, interpretations of, 113; nature-society interactions, 130; and novelty, 115, 124–25; political-religions tensions, 120–21; and political theory, 105; practical applications of, 118; river descriptions, 103; Scholasticism, challenges to, 110–11; strengths of, 121; structure of, 114–15; style of, 107; theological aspects, 112, 118; writing of, 2

Natural history: contemporary relevance, 128, 137; early modern, 26, 127; evolution of, 15; historical methods, 131; and history of empire, 141; as imperial strategy, 29; moral dimensions, 128–29; natural philosophy transformation, 127; and nature, pleasures of, 142; nature-society interactions, 127, 130; as political theory genre, 3, 127, 137–39; in political theory history, 3, 8, 40; and politics of historiography, 130–34; and science, early modern, 131; and the Scientific Revolution, 14–15; as scientific storytelling, 132; as storytelling, 133; and theology, 15; and vernacular literary cultures, 165n6

Natural history of the New World: accounts of, 20; aims of, 15–16, 22; aspirations of, 19; and British imperialism, 122; versus chivalric epics, 21–22; as civilizational narrative, 14; and colonial expansion, 33; as coveted discipline, 100; and cultural interpretation, 140; data collection, 127; disrepute of, 139; elements comprising, 61; Enlightenment critiques of, 27–28; on environments, impact of, 37; epistemologies of possession, 160n9; ethnography’s role in, 27; and European taxonomies, 50; and experimental science, 33; and extractivism, 14; and historical understanding, 60; and historiographical knowledge, 115; imagination in, 134; and imperial decline, 137–38; and imperialism, 6, 88, 136, 140; and imperial priorities, 88; and intellectual transformations, 3; legitimating imperial rule, 36; missionaries and, 73; and morality, shifting conceptions of, 17; narrative tropes, 14; nature in, 30, 45; and nature-society interactions, 101, 141; as political, 30, 33; and political economy, 119; practitioners of, 4; and the problem of recognition, 50; published forms of, 131; and La Reconquista, 15, 66; religious dimensions, 66; and Renaissance thought, 91; representational dilemmas, 50, 56; rhetorical description in, 16; scientific aspirations of, 88; scientific principles, enabling new, 130; shortcomings of, 85; studies of, 122; studying, importance of, 140; and subversive knowledge control, 30; theological aspects, 130; untamed landscape tropes, 14, 147n3; and wonder, 2–3. See also Acosta, José de; Hernández, Francisco; Las Casas, Bartolomé de; Oviedo, Gonzalo Fernández de; Sahagún, Bernardino de

Natural history of the New World, constitutive narratives of: of conquest, 24–28; demonology as anthropology, 27–30; naturalist dissonance, 31–34; nature-society connections, 23–24; overview of, 22, 236; and La Reconquista, 23, 26; tropes of, 22–23

Natural history of the New World, influence of: on modern science, 8, 130, 137, 140–41; on modern thought, 2–3, 8, 10; overview of, 6; and political transformations, 8
Naturalism: and empire, 61; and faith, 61; and imperialism, 73; moral history of, 134–37; in the New World, 21; Spanish, 41, 61, 69, 124, 134–37
Naturalist dissonance narratives, 31–34
Naturalist epics: Las Casas’s, 28, 55–60, 138; origins of, 22, 135; overview of, 41–42; Oviedo’s, 138

Natural man, 46, 80, 106
Natural philosophy: debates of, 120; Hernández’s, 33–34, 138; Jesuit, 108–9; Las Casas’s, 41; in Natural and Moral History of the Indies, 34, 109–10; natural history roots, 127; Oviedo’s, 41. See also Acosta, José de, natural philosophy of Nature: as actor, 37; conceptualizations of, 4–5; and contemplation, 133; and demonic forces, 27; and empire, 41, 120, 153n8; and empire, political theory of, 7; encounters with, 8; and fear, 30; Great Book metaphor, 22, 23, 33–34, 116; Hernández’s interpretations of, 116; historical roles of, 132; and history, research on, 41, 153n8; impact on imperial actions, 21; impact on people, 35, 37; interpretation of, 116; and judgment, 34, 106; modernist attitudes toward, 101; modern views of, 132–33; moral appropriation of, 26; as order, 30; representations of, 6; and value creation, 37

Nature-faith-empire dynamics, 5, 61, 116, 128, 140

Nature-society interactions: climate change, 6, 132–33, 140–41, 144n18; contemporary, 129, 140–41; exploring, 101; framings of, 132; Hernández and, 101; interdisciplinary approaches to, 129–30; moral dimensions, 133; in natural history of the New World, 101, 141

Nebrija, Antonio de, 89, 91, 163n16

New World: Bacon, influence on, 123; Bacon’s thought in, 123; debates raised by, 60; and empirical learning, 48; environmental history reconstructions, 143n10; historiographical dilemmas, 81; historiography of, 45; impacts of, 8, 45–46, 128; and imperial extraction, 14; information about, desire for, 105; intellectual activities in, 122; myths about, 56; revolutionary implications of, 65–66; and wonder, 158n61

New World, Spanish conquest of: Black Legend narratives, 53, 114, 123; and British imperialism, 122–23; legislation changes following, 21; natural history narratives of, 24–27; nature’s roles in, 120; notoriety of, 18; religious views of, 24; science informing, 91; and scientific worldviews, emergence of, 18–20. See also Spiritual Conquest

The noble savage, 46

O’Gorman, Edmundo, 115

Olarte, Mauricio Nieto, 36

Oviedo, Gonzalo Fernández de: versus Acosta, 112; career of, 48–49; and civilization narratives, 62; conquest, morality of, 135; epigraph quotations, 39; Hernández’s view of, 91; as historian, 133; indigenous peoples, view of, 61; Las Casas, rivalry with, 40–41, 49, 53, 157n43; mentioned, 15, 58; natural philosophy of, 41; nature, views of, 60, 98, 116; and the New World, 26, 49; political ambiguity, 136–37; and La Reconquista, 27, 49, 90; rhetorical description, 16

Oviedo, Gonzalo Fernández de, writings of: approach to, 52; chivalric epics, 48–49, 158n41; conquest narratives in, 24, 27; ethical models in, 22; eyewitness accounts in, 55; General and Natural history of the Indies, 24, 39, 49; historical contexts, 49; ideological contexts, 47; ideologies of, 25–26; motivations for, 52; nature as timeless, 40; nature in, 24–25, 47, 52; on Spain’s responsibilities, 25. See also Summary of the Natural History of the Indies

Owensby, Brian, 20

Pagden, Anthony: on “barbarians,” 155n32; on cultural relativism, 108; on Diego de Landa, 29; on empire and nature, 153n8; on epistemologies of possession, 160n9; The Fall of Natural Man, 7, 21, 46, 80; on grand narratives, 99; impact of, 44; on indigenous peoples, European views of, 46, 155n31; on natural history projects, 47; on naturalist epics, 41–42; on the nature-faith-empire dynamic, 128; on New World travelers, 147n13; on the problem of recognition, 50, 147n15; on representation, 56; on the scientific revolution, 158n67; on the Spanish Empire, 154n24; work of, 119

Pels, Peter, 64

Phelan, John, 95

Philip II: career of, 166n24; and Hernández, 86, 91, 93, 97–99; science, interest in, 33; son, 55

Phillips, Anne, 7

Pitts, Jennifer, 7, 41–42, 44, 60–61, 154n19

Pliny, 52, 66, 72, 85, 90–92

Pocock, John, 44, 154n24
Political ethnology, 33
Political judgment, 121
Political theory: comparative, 42; contemporary, 154n20; early modern, 2–4; and indigenous peoples, 65, 83; and Latin American studies, 3–4; liberalism in, 7–8, 43–44, 154n19; methodology, 131; natural history, approach to, 37–38; natural history as genre of, 3, 127, 137–39; of the Spanish Empire, 5, 44; training in, 3. See also Empire, political theory of Political theory, history of: interpretation's role in, 131; natural history in, 3, 8, 40; nature's impact on, 40; and the New World, 45–46, 128; Sor Juana's absence from, 127; Spanish America, 42
Portuguese Empire, 44
Portuondo, María, 21, 86–87, 99
Premo, Bianca, 10, 20
Prieto, Andrés, 49, 52, 102, 113
Primero Sueño, 127
Problem of recognition, 50, 147n5
Recchi, Nardo Antonio, 92
La Reconquista: chivalric poetry of, 21, 26–27; Las Casas and, 27; and natural history, 15–16; and natural history narratives, 23, 26; and the New World conquest, 49, 157n47; overview of, 15; Oviedo and, 27, 49
Reeves, Henry, 75
Renaissance, 91, 99–100
Rhetoric, 109
Ricard, Robert, 70
Ricoeur, Paul, 16
Rousseau, Jean-Jacques, 46
Sahagún, Bernardino de: versus Acosta, 104; anthropological system of, 30; empire, view of, 135; ethnographic work, 28–29, 63–64, 81, 135; versus Hernández, 91; influence of, 82; and landscapes, 75; legacy of, 82; mentioned, 15–16, 35, 62, 113; missionary aims of, 66, 71, 98–99; natural history of, 138; nature, study of, 67, 116; political ambiguity, 136–37; and religious compromise, 70; reputation of, 67; and the Spiritual Conquest, 64, 76–77, 80, 82; writings of, 22, 28–30. See also Florentine Codex
Sahagún, Bernardino de, and indigenous peoples: collaboration with, 28–29; cultural immersion, 70; dehumanization of, 63; knowledge collection, 64; religion of, 73; rituals collection, 30; views of, 28, 30, 66
Said, Edward, 11
Scholarly exclusion, 134, 138
Scholasticism: versus Acosta's natural philosophy, 31–34; challenges to, 31, 110–11; overview of, 47; speculative intellect, 61
School of Salamanca, 148n19
Science: early modern, 128–29, 131; and empire, 6, 120; experimental, 33; and failure, 87, 100; grand narratives of, 87; imperial politics of, 6; natural, Acosta's groundwork for, 124; natural history's aspirations to, 133; patriotic, 114; and politics, 101; principles of, 130; and state power, 33; and storytelling, 132
Science, modern: natural history's influence, 8, 130, 137, 140–41; naturalist contributions to, 34–37
Scientific Revolution: Acosta's influence on, 138; emergence of, 14–15, 86; Iberian contributions, 86–87; Iberian contributions, exclusions of, 119; natural history and, 14–15
Seed, Patricia, 15
Sepúlveda, Juan Ginés de. See Debate at Valladolid
Sigal, Pete, 71
Skinner, Quentin, 4, 9
Slavery, abolition of, 55
Smith, Adam, 16
Society of Jesus: founding of, 110, 115; imperial science contributions, 108; and judgment, 109; missionaries, 104, 110; natural philosophy of, 108–9; and spiritual cultivation, 116
Spanish Empire: backwardness myths, 10, 139; Bacon on, 122–23, 167n47; bureaucratic rivalry, 18; Charles V, 19, 49; competing interests within, 35; as composite state, 18; cultural changes, 88–89; decline of, 136–38; and the Enlightenment, 10, 147n4; Enlightenment criticisms of, 39–40; as environmental conflict, 141; exploration and data collection, 35; humanist science, 88–89; ideologies, competing, 89–90; imperial legitimacy debates, 7, 18, 41; imperial political thought in, 9; innovations of, 120; language, 22, 89; modernity, contributions to, 18–20; narrative tropes of, 21; nature, instrumentalization of, 101; negative reputation of, 19–20; New Laws of 1542, 55; political flexibility of, 149n20; in political theory, 5, 44; prejudices, common, 90; Renaissance thought
Spanish Empire—continued
in, 91; scientific endeavors, 17–18; and the scientific revolution, 158n67; spiritual cultivation of colonial society, 44; state secrecy, 17–18, 33, 35. See also New World, Spanish conquest of Spanish thinkers and the Western canon, 81–82 Spiritual Conquest: missionaries and, 28; overview of, 9; Sahagún and, 64, 76–77, 80, 82 State of nature, 106, 161n28, 165n15 Stolley, Karen, 35

Summary of the Natural History of the Indies
(Oviedo): challenges to description, 50; empire-history relationships, 49–50; epistemology of, 50, 52, 57; ideological contexts, 47, 49; illustrations in, 50, 51; memory, as written from, 52; as naturalist epic, 138; purposes of, 52–53; and Spanish history, 41; translations of, 153n5; writing of, 49

Theology: Acosta and, 112, 114–15, 120–21, 138; and empire, 31; and indigenous peoples, 73–74, 105; liberation, 102; and natural history, 15; naturalist, 33, 109, 124; and natural philosophy, 34; and New World discovery, 45; and Scholasticism, 31 Thiele, Leslie Paul, 17, 121

Thurner, Mark, 17 Todorov, Tzvetan, 25, 48, 150n32 Toledo, Francisco de, 1, 110, 115 Travel narratives, 26

Universidad de Alcalá de Henares, 89–91, 95, 110

von Vacano, Diego, 5, 58, 144n13, 159n70 Varey, Simon, 85 Vilchis, Jaime, 165n46 Vitoria, Francisco de, 61

White, Hayden, 16 Whitehead, Neil, 138 Wigen, Einar, 162n49 Wonder: cultivation of, 2; European desire for, 15; in Las Casas, 46–47, 60; moral, 3; and naturalizing empire, 136; and nature, 36; and New World encounters, 115, 158n61; in Oviedo, 46–47; phenomenology of, 134; as political, 36; and Spanish naturalism, 61 Writing, 48, 156n39

Ximenez, Francisco, 92

Yolia, 76–78