ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

This book is the result of long years of cooperation between many people, as well as the culmination of a series of enterprises (conferences, exhibitions, special issues, and several individual articles in academic periodicals) centered around the international research project Staged Otherness: Human Oddities in Central Europe, 1850–1939.

Each stage of the project involved the active cooperation of many individuals, whose goodwill and assistance ultimately made the enterprise successful. We would like to express our gratitude to our friends and colleagues, who offered much intellectual and emotional support: Guido Abbattista, Timea Barabas, Kamila Baraniecka-Olszewska, Ilze Boldāne-Zeļenkova, Ágnes Fülemile, Anssi Halmesvirta, Filip Herza, Bartosz Hlebowicz, Iwona Kabzińska, László Kontler, Izabela Kopania, Ildikó Sz. Kristóf, Markéta Křižová, Liisi Laineste, Maria Leskinen, Andreja Mesarič, Jana Milovanović, Clemens Radauer, Fanny Robles, István Sántha, Evgeny Savitsky, Oyungere Tångad, Hilke Thode-Arora, Bodhari Warsame, Andrea Zittlau.

We extend our thanks to all the staff members in libraries, archives, and museums, whom we are unable to list by name, but who assisted in the research with great commitment.

We owe a debt of gratitude to everyone who shared visual material and made it available to be published here. Our thanks go to private collectors Clemens Radauer, Hilke Thode-Arora, Bodhari Warsame, and public institutions: Archive of Poznań Zoological Garden; Archive of the Zoological Garden in Wroclaw; the Gliwice Branch of the State Archive in Katowice; and the Ethnographic Museum in Kraków. On behalf of the authors, we express our gratitude to all institutions that supported their research and contributed to the emergence of the chapters of this publication.

We would also like to offer our thanks to the Institute of Art of the Polish Academy of Sciences, particularly to Izabela Kopania, who co-organized the international conference in Warsaw in 2017; as well as to the Central European University, particularly to László Kontler; and the Institute of Ethnology, RCH, Hungarian Academy of Sciences, particularly to Ágnes Fülemile, Ildikó Sz. Kristóf, and Balázs Balogh, who co-organized the international conference in Budapest in 2019.
We are grateful to the Director of the Asia and Pacific Museum in Warsaw, Dr. Joanna Wasilewska, for her assistance in the organization of the exhibition entitled Human Zoos: The Invention of the Savage, parallel to the academic conference in 2017.

Likewise, our thanks go to the French research group ACHAC, led by Pascal Blanchard, who allowed their exhibition on ethnic shows in Western Europe to be presented at the Asia and Pacific Museum, and supplemented with additional panels pertaining to shows staged in Central and Eastern Europe. We are also grateful for the permission to present the movie Paris Couleurs: Zoos Humains to Polish audiences.

We are profoundly grateful to the anonymous reviewers of the book, whose valuable insight and comments allowed the publication to reach its final form.

The entire project, including the writing of the book, was funded by the National Science Centre Grant No. UMO-2015/19/B/HS3/02143 awarded in 2015. Without financial support, the research project would have been impossible to complete. We also extend our thanks to the Institute of Archaeology and Ethnology of the Polish Academy of Sciences, for offering administrative and organizational support, and to the Ministry of Science and Higher Education, which provided financial assistance in the organization of the international academic conference in Warsaw.
