Growing in the Shadow of Antifascism

Stach, Stephan, Hallama, Peter, Bohus, Kata

Published by Central European University Press

Stach, Stephan, et al.

Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/94691.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/94691
Figures

Figure 4.1. Gyula Ortutay, representing the ruling communist Hungarian Workers’ Party, speaks at the Jewish National Assembly, 1950

Figure 5.1. Exhibition objects in the Ninth Fort Museum

Figure 5.2. Former prisoners at the opening of the Ninth Fort Museum in 1959 explain how they had escaped from the Ninth Fort

Figure 5.3. Former prisoners of the Ninth Fort

Figure 6.1. The synagogue in Dąbrowa Tarnowska, 2007

Figure 6.2. A memorial for the Jewish victims, erected in 1958 in the Jewish cemetery in Kolbuszowa, 2016

Figure 6.3. The Jewish cemetery in Sokółka, 2014

Figure 6.4. Warta, the Jewish Cemetery, 1986

Figure 6.5. Ireneusz Ślipek (first from the left) during preservation works in the Jewish Cemetery of Warta, 1987

Figure 8.1. Ferenc Laborcz, Design for the Hungarian Martyr Memorial in Mauthausen, (Boy killing a snake), 1:10 model, 1960

Figure 8.2. Ferenc Laborcz, Design for the Hungarian Martyr Memorial in Mauthausen, (Woman with her hands raised towards the sky), 1:10 model, 1960

Figure 8.3. István Kiss, Design for the Hungarian Martyr Memorial in Mauthausen, 1:10 model, 1960

Figure 8.4. József Somogyi, Design for the Hungarian Martyr Memorial in Mauthausen, 1960

Figure 8.5. István Martsa, Design for the Hungarian Martyr Memorial in Mauthausen, 1:10 model, 1960

Figure 8.6. István Martsa, Design for the Hungarian Martyr Memorial in Mauthausen, 1:50 model inserted into the model of the site, 1960

Figure 8.7. Agamemnon Makrisz, Design for the Hungarian Martyr Memorial in Mauthausen, 1:10 model, 1960

Figure 8.8. Agamemnon Makrisz, Design for the Hungarian Martyr Memorial in Mauthausen, 1:50 model inserted into the model of the site, 1960
Figures

Figure 8.9. Rezső Berczeller, Mauthausen, 1958

Figure 8.10. Nandor Glid, Memorial of the Yugoslav Victims, Mauthausen, 1957–58

Figure 8.11. Gyula Konfár, Resistance in the Camp (Prisoners of the concentration camp), 1965

Figure 8.12. György Konecsni, Liberation (A man, a woman, their child, and the dove of peace), 1965

Figure 8.13. István Martsa, Sculpture for the Hungarian Exhibition in Auschwitz, 1965

Figure 8.14. József Somogyi, Mother with Her Child, before 1965

Figure 8.15. Tibor Barabás, Forced March, 1959

Figure 8.16. Gyula Hincz, Miklós Horthy's Coming to Power (The Rider of Reactionaryism), 1965

Figure 8.17. János Kass, Massacre of Novi Sad in 1942, 1965

Figure 8.18. János Kass, Forced Labor or Ghetto (on the right); Mass Murders Carried Out by the Arrow Cross at the Danube (on the left), 1965

Figure 8.19. János Kass, Anti-Jewish Laws (?), 1965

Figure 8.20. Béla Kondor, Auschwitz: Appell!!!, 1965

Figure 8.21. Endre Szász, Jewish Man with a Yellow Star, 1965

Figure 8.22. Endre Szász, Masks, 1965

Figure 8.23. Hungarian Artists Against Fascism, catalogue cover, Hungarian National Gallery, 1965

Figure 10.1. Heinz Knobloch at Moses Mendelssohn’s grave at Große Hamburger Straße, Berlin, 1986

Figure 11.1. Picture in Sovetish Heymland about locating the site of the Medzhbizher mass killings. The Yiddish caption reads: “At the mass grave, one of the creators of the monument, I. A. Sinitsin (in the front), and the author of Natisn, M. Eynhorn, determine and mark (farpinktlekhn) the location where the mass shootings took place.”

Figure 11.2. Picture in Sovetish Heymland of survivors and Jewish natives of Medzhbizher visiting the site of the Medzhbizher mass killings during their annual memorial meeting. The Yiddish caption reads: “Medzhbizher landsleyt (compatriots) at a meeting at the mass grave.”

Figure 12.1. Ber Mark (1908–1966), director of the Jewish Historical Institute in Warsaw

Figure 12.2. Dust jacket cover of the 1957 edition of Der Aufstand im Warschauer Ghetto

Figure 12.3. Dust jacket cover of the 1958 edition of Im Feuer vergangen: Tagebücher aus dem Ghetto

Figure 12.4. Dust jacket cover of the 1958 edition of Faschismus—Getto—Massenmord

Figure 12.5. Newspaper advertisement for Faschismus—Getto—Massenmord

Figure 12.6. A dedication on the first page of a copy of Im Feuer vergangen, which had been a present for a new member of the SED

Figure 12.7. Sheet 2 of the woodcut series “Es brennt, Briderle, es brennt” by Klaus Zürner

viii