Author

Morris M. Kleiner is a professor at the Humphrey School of Public Affairs, and he teaches at the Center for Human Resources and Labor Studies, both at the University of Minnesota–Twin Cities. He has received many university teaching awards for classes in public affairs, business, and economics. He is a research associate in labor studies with the National Bureau of Economic Research in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and he serves as a visiting scholar in the economic research department at the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis. He has been a professor at the University of Kansas, an associate in employment policy with the Brookings Institution, a visiting scholar in the Harvard University economics department, a visiting researcher in the Industrial Relations Section at Princeton University, a visiting scholar at the W.E. Upjohn Institute for Employment Research, and a research fellow at the London School of Economics. He received a doctorate in economics from the University of Illinois. He began his research on occupational licensing at the U.S. Department of Labor in 1976, while working for the Brookings Institution. His work has been supported by the National Science Foundation, the Department of Labor, the Department of Health and Human Services, the United Kingdom Commission for Employment and Skills, the Smith Richardson Foundation, the Kauffman Foundation, and the W.E. Upjohn Institute for Employment Research. In the United States, Professor Kleiner has provided advice on occupational regulation policy to the Federal Trade Commission, the Council of Economic Advisers, the Department of the Treasury, the Department of Justice, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, federal interagency statistical panels, state legislatures, and occupational licensing associations. Internationally, he has provided testimony on occupational regulation to United Kingdom cabinet officers and their parliamentary committees, to cabinet officials responsible for occupational regulation in Australia, and to officials of the European Union.
