Kristin S. Seefeldt holds a faculty research appointment at the Gerald R. Ford School of Public Policy at the University of Michigan and is the assistant director of the National Poverty Center. She has conducted research and published articles on a variety of social welfare policy issues, including evaluations of welfare-to-work programs as well as analyses of the well-being of former welfare recipients and low-wage workers. Her work has been published in journals such as the American Journal of Public Health, Social Service Review, Social Science Quarterly, and the Annual Review of Sociology. Currently she is conducting a qualitative study of low-income families' economic coping strategies during economic downturns. She holds a B.A. from Georgetown University, a master’s degree in public policy from the University of Michigan, and is completing her doctoral degree at the University of Michigan in sociology and public policy.
