Income Volatility and Food Assistance in the United States
Jolliffe, Dean, Ziliak, James P.

Published by W.E. Upjohn Institute

Jolliffe, Dean and James P. Ziliak.
Income Volatility and Food Assistance in the United States.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/17388.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/17388

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=590187
Contents

Acknowledgments

vii

1 Introduction

1

Dean Jolliffe and James P. Ziliak

Part 1: The Relationship between Income Volatility and Program Participation

2 Trends in Income and Consumption Volatility, 1970–2000

11

Benjamin J. Keys

3 Variable Effects of Earnings Volatility on Food Stamp Participation

35

Robert Moffitt and David C. Ribar

Part 2: Income Volatility, Welfare Reform, and Use of the Food Stamp Program

4 Earnings Volatility and the Reasons for Leaving the Food Stamp Program

63

David C. Ribar and Marilyn Edelhoch

5 The Dynamics of Food Stamp Receipt after Welfare Reform among Current and Former Welfare Recipients

103

Brian Cadena, Sheldon Danziger, and Kristin Seefeldt

Part 3: Income Volatility and Implications for Serving Children and the Elderly

6 Income Volatility and Its Implications for School Lunch

137

Constance Newman

7 The Age Gradient in Food Stamp Program Participation: Does Income Volatility Matter?

171

Craig Gundersen and James P. Ziliak
Part 4: Design of Food Assistance Programs

8 Design of Assistance Programs to Address Real Income Volatility 217
   Robin Boadway, Katherine Cuff, and Nicolas Marceau

9 Income Volatility and Certification Duration for WIC Children 259
   Mark A. Prell

The Authors 295

Index 297

About the Institute 309