Do Community Colleges Respond to Local Needs?

Leigh, Duane E., Gill, Andrew M.

Published by W.E. Upjohn Institute

Leigh, Duane E. and Andrew M. Gill.

Do Community Colleges Respond to Local Needs? Evidence from California.

Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/17787.
Acknowledgments

We gratefully acknowledge the financial support of the W.E. Upjohn Institute for Employment Research. Patrick Perry in the California Community College System Chancellor’s Office kindly provided us with the student records analyzed in this project. Myra Hoffman, Willard Hom, and Charles Klein in the Chancellor’s Office helped us with our understanding of the data and provided guidance on administrative details of the operation of the System. Bonnie Graybill and Carl Hedlind in California’s Employment Development Department provided valuable assistance with the occupational labor demand projections used in Chapter 7. A paper based on some of the results in Chapters 5 and 6 was presented at the Second Society of Labor Economists/European Association of Labour Economists World Congress, which took place in San Francisco on June 3–5, 2005. Chris Jepsen and Steve Trejo provided us with helpful comments on that paper. We received a large number of insightful comments on the first draft of the manuscript from three outside reviewers and from Kevin Hollenbeck, our project monitor. Lu Anh Nguyen provided excellent research assistance. Allison Hewitt Colosky expeditiously handled the final steps in preparing the manuscript for publication.