Portraits and Poses

van Deinsen, Lieke, Vanacker, Beatrijs

Published by Leuven University Press

van Deinsen, Lieke and Beatrijs Vanacker.
Portraits and Poses: Female Intellectual Authority, Agency and Authorship in Early Modern Europe.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/100515

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=3150386
About the Authors

Laura Beck Varela is associate professor of history of law at the Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. Her recent publications focus on the history of legal education, book history, circulation of legal literature, and the connections between jurisprudence and the querelle des femmes.

Feike Dietz is assistant professor of early modern Dutch literature at Utrecht University. Her research focuses on the relationship between literature, knowledge, and literacy, especially with regard to youth and women.

Armel Dubois-Nayt is associate professor at the University de Versailles Saint-Quentin-en-Yvelines and at the Université Paris-Saclay. She is also a member of Dynamiques patrimoniales et culturelles. Her research interests focus on women’s history, the controversy over female rule, and more generally the early modern querelle des femmes.

Nina Geerdink is assistant professor of early modern Dutch literature at Utrecht University. Her research centres on authorship, patronage, and social poetry, with a special interest in women’s writing.

Aurélie Griffin is senior lecturer in early modern English literature and translation at Université Sorbonne Nouvelle – Paris 3. Her monograph entitled La Muse de l’humeur noire. Urania de Lady Mary Wroth, une poétique de la mélancolie was published by Classiques Garnier in 2018. She has published various articles on Lady Mary Wroth, Sir Philip Sidney, and Shakespeare. She is currently leading two collaborative research projects dealing with early modern women’s writings.

Seren Nolan is a cultural historian specialising in receptions of antiquity in long eighteenth century Europe and America, with a particular focus on gender and classicism. Her doctorate was awarded by the Department of Classics and Ancient History and the Centre for Visual Arts and Cultures at Durham University.
Caroline Paganussi is the American Friends of Capodimonte Postdoctoral Curatorial Fellow at the Museo e Real Bosco di Capodimonte in Naples, Italy. She received her doctorate in art history and archaeology from the University of Maryland, College Park in 2021.

Marie-Emmanuelle Plagnol-Diéval is emeritus professor of eighteenth-century French literature at University Paris-Est Créteil, and she is a specialist in educational literature and theatre.

Kelsey Rubin-Detlev is assistant professor of Slavic languages and literatures at the University of Southern California. She is the author of The Epistolary Art of Catherine the Great (Oxford University Studies in the Enlightenment, Liverpool University Press, 2019) and co-translator and co-editor with Andrew Kahn of Catherine the Great’s Selected Letters (Oxford University Press, 2018).

Belinda Scerri teaches art history in the School of Culture and Communication at the University of Melbourne, where she is also a fellow of the Centre of Visual Art. Her research engages with seventeenth- and eighteenth-century French art and architecture.

Catriona Seth is the Marshal Foch Professor of French Literature at the University of Oxford and a fellow of All Souls College. A fellow of the British Academy and of the Academia Europaea, she has published widely on the literature and cultural history of the long eighteenth century.

Beatrijs Vanacker is assistant professor of French literature and translation history at the Department of Literary Studies at KU Leuven.

Lieke van Deinsen is senior postdoctoral researcher in art and Dutch literary history at KU Leuven.

Lien Verpoest is associate professor in diplomatic and Russian history at the Department of History of the KU Leuven Faculty of Arts. She is director of the KU Leuven Centre for Russian studies, and she is currently a board member of the Dutch-Belgian Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies.

Vera Viehöver is professor of German literature at the Department of Modern Languages at the University of Liège. She is a member of the editorial board of the scientific journal Germanistische Mitteilungen and has edited numerous articles on eighteenth-century literature, especially on musicians’ autobiographies.
Rotraud von Kulessa has been the chair of Romance literature (French and Italian) at Augsburg University since 2011, where she directed the research project Educatrices des Lumières with Catriona Seth (Oxford University). Her research is mainly focused on French and Italian women of the eighteenth century.

Valerie Worth-Stylianou is professor of French at Oxford University and a fellow at Trinity College Oxford. She has led the Birth through History Knowledge Exchange Project with midwives, archivists, and other researchers.