Middlebrow Modernism

Christopher Chowrimootoo

Published by University of California Press

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/63406

For content related to this chapter https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=2270870 Abbate, Carolyn: on emotional restraint written into stage directions, 190n148; on the similar sentimental effects of the collapse into silence and speech, 59 abstraction: intellectual, 175; in Slater’s libretto for Peter Grimes, 42; staging (in Death in Venice), 157, 161
Ackland, Rodney, 92
acousmêtre, 112
Adlington, Robert: on avant-garde composition and musical theater, 174
Adorno, Theodor, 153: on duplicity and ambivalence in Britten, 27; on familiarity vs. quality, 12; on the great divide as necessary, 6; on light music, 10; on LPs, 151; on Lulu (Berg), 116; on opera, 24, 120, 150–51, 162, 171–75; on postwar eclectics, 15; on Schoenberg, 28–29, 77; on Sibelius’s music, 12; on uncompromising modernism, 5 aestheticism: religious, 26, 117–19; 121–24, 145; theological opposition to, 119
Alan, A. J., 92
Albert Herring, 25, 63–87; borrowed musical voices in, 78–85; poignancy in, 82
Albright, Daniel: on ballet in opera, 158; “body music,” 167–68; on the philosophical opera, 155 ambiguity: 20, 23, 89, 94, 103–4
Amis, John: on Death in Venice, 149
Anderson, W. R.: on the lack of a meaningful story line in Albert Herring, 73 anti-heroism: in mid-century criticism, 48–49; in Peter Grimes, 49–50 antiques: fetishization of, 11–12
ApIvor, Denis: on Britten’s eclecticism, 19
Archibald, William: Innocents, 94–95 asceticism: in bourgeois operatic music (Adorno), 173–74; in Britten’s music, 121–33; of “holy theatre,” 121
astrology: in Peter Grimes, 42
atonality: as shibboleth, 5; and tradition (Lambert), 85
Auden, W. H., 1–4, 41; on the hymn, 122; “outspoken topicality” of, 65–66; realism in opera (as a contradiction in terms), 57; realism in poetry, 34; on satire, 67 audience: “audience opera,” 155; and composer (Lambert), 6; persuading vs. persuaded by, 5–6, 14, 28, 162; suffering, 61; sympathy, 45, 50
Auner, Joseph: on Schoenberg’s contradictions, 28
Baker, Roger: comparing Britten’s Death in Venice with Visconti’s film version, 156; on interpreting Death in Venice, 149
Barzun, Jacques, 200n77: “Henry James, Melodramatist,” 103; on melodrama, 90
“battle of the brows,” 4, 7, 9
Baxter, Beverly: on London’s standing (in light of Peter Grimes premiere), 30; on Peter Grimes, 61
BBC, the: Appointment with Fear, 91, 114; as the “Betwixt and Between Company” (Woolf), 9; and Britten, 17–18; criticism of, 10; and middlebrow anxiety, 14; the responsibilities of (according to Reith), 9–11

Beckett, Samuel, 121

Bennett, Richard Rodney, 151

Bentley, Eric: on music and conceptual thought, 161–62

Berg, Alban, 5, 49; Lulu, 116; Wozzeck, 62, 113, 175

Betjeman, John, 122

bird sounds, 60

Birkhead, Edith: on the Gothic novel, 91, 114; Tale of Terror, 90

Birtwistle, Harrison: Tragœdia, 174

Blyth, Alan: comparing Britten’s Death in Venice with Visconti’s film version, 156

Bonner, Eugene: on Paul Bunyan, 2

Bourdieu, Pierre: on the counterfeit, 15–16

Boulez, Pierre, 145; on opera, 24, 150–52, 162–63, 172–75

Bowie, David: on the “music industry” of Britten, 17

Bowen, Elizabeth: The Demon Lover, 88–90, 196n5

Brecht, Bertolt, 151; music as a narcotic, 161

Brett, Philip: on Albert Herring, 86; on Britten and queerness, 22–23, 149; on Death in Venice, 149; on the Gothic garb of The Turn of the Screw, 89

Britten, Benjamin, 16–25; and the avant-garde, 18–19, 145; on the BBC, 18; and the church, 121–22; and critics, 20–21, 28; eclecticism of, 19, 25, 77–79, 194n78, 194n81; and the Gothic, 92; on the idea of a “naked ballet,” 158; and the individual’s struggle against the masses, 48; and literalism, 109–13; the musical “signature” of, 80; and opera, 24; popularity of, 17–18, 23; on Puccini, 18; and querness, 22–23; and religion, 122–24; on Schoenberg, 17; on setting everyday language, 193n44; and social realism, 34; on Stravinsky, 122; the “true voice” of, 84; on Wagner, 122. Works: Albert Herring, 25, 63–87; Billy Budd, 103, 154; A Boy Was Born, 18, 122; The Burning Fiery Furnace, 26, 117–46; A Ceremony of Carols, 122; Curlew River, 26, 124, 126–27, 134, 136, 138, 143, 145, 152; Death in Venice, 26–27, 148–75; Nocturne, 92; Noye’s Fludde, 24, 122, 124; Owen Wingrave, 92, 152; Paul Bunyan, 1–4, 25; Peter Grimes, 17, 25, 30–62, 74, 82, 154, 164; The Prince of the Pagodas, 129; The Rape of Lucretia, 66, 73–74; Saint Nicolas, 122; Serenade, 92; Simple Symphony, 18, 92; Sinfonietta, 18; Songs and Proverbs of William Blake, 123; Spring Symphony, 129; Te Deum, 18; The Turn of the Screw, 26, 89–116, 144, 163; War Requiem, 21, 26, 92, 123; The Young Person’s Guide to the Orchestra, 24

Broadway: Britten and Auden’s desires for, 1

Broch, Hermann: on kitsch and (hypocritical) exaltation, 120

Bronté, Charlotte: Jane Eyre, 114

Brock, Peter: on the “holy theatre,” 120–21, 129

Brooks, Van Wyck: on a brow-divided America, 4; on the rejection of lavish theaters and opera houses, 126

Burgess, Anthony: on the “sensuous” spirituality of aesthetes, 119

Burning Fiery Furnace, The, 26, 117–46

Capell, Richard: on reading Freud between the lines of Albert Herring, 75; on reimagining Albert Herring, 73

Cardus, Neville: on Britten’s musical “signature,” 80; on the final-act threnody in Albert Herring, 76

Carnegy, Patrick: on the Apollonian and Dionysian in Death in Venice, 156; on the “closely related themes” of Death in Venice, 164

Carner, Mosco: on Puccini’s operas, 33

Carter, Elliot, 172

Chandler, James: on sentimentality and audience sympathy, 45–46

Chinitz, David: on the religious conviction of T. S. Eliot, 204n21

Chion, Michel: on acousmêtre, 112

chorus: as proxy for the audience’s interpretive dilemmas and vacillations (in Peter Grimes), 46

Clair, René: The Ghost Goes West, 92

Clark, Suzanne: “sentimental modernism,” 62

clichés: in Albert Herring, 71–72, 74; in The Turn of the Screw, 99, 104

Coal Face (Cavalcanti), 57

Cohen, Brigid: on modernism, 7–8

Coleman, Basil: and the Gothic imagery in The Turn of the Screw, 94

Conrich, Ian: on the Gothic tradition in film, 92 convention: defending (Woolf), 66; idiosyncrasy and, 64; obsolete, 67; rejection of, 5, 28–29, 32, 48, 50–51; romantic, 50; as “ruin” for the modern writer (Woolf), 65; sentimental, 34

Cooper, Martin: critiquing Albert Herring, 73; on (and off) eroticism in Death in Venice, 156; on the hermeneutic “levels” of Death in Venice, 149; on the set of Death in Venice, 153; on talkative ghosts in The Turn of the Screw, 97–98

Copland, Aaron, 15

corporeality: operatic, 157–62, 174–75

counterfeits: aesthetic, 15–16

Crabbe, George: The Borough, 34–35, 44, 48

Crozier, Eric: and Albert Herring’s dialogue, 70–72–75, 85; on Crabbe’s realism, 34–35; on Peter Grimes’s pessimism, 40; on Peter Grimes’s realism, 35; “selective realism,” 38

cultural tradition: in Between the Acts, 63, 65

culture wars, 4

Cunningham, Merce, 121

Curlew River, 26, 124, 126–27, 134, 136, 138, 143, 145, 152

Davies, Maxwell: Vesalii Icones, 174

Death in Venice, 26–27, 148–75: as a “bourgeois opera,” 27, 173; (apparent) misreadings of, 149

de Gay, Jane: on Woolf’s discomfort with reading literature, 65

de la Mare, Walter, 90

Demuth, Charles, 104

Dent, Edward: on librettos, 41–42; on Sadler’s Wells as thriving on a form of middle-class voyeurism, 41

Dickens, Charles, 50; Little Dorrit, 45; and popularity/prestige, 5; realism/sentimentality (for Orwell), 41

Dillon, Sarah: on The Demon Lover, 89

documentary film: rise of the, 34

Douglas, Phoebe: on the originality and timeliness of Albert Herring, 80

Downes, Olin: on Paul Bunyan, 2

duplicity: aesthetics of, 27; middlebrow, 13–17; 19–20, 24, 29; and modernism, 28; and opera, 24; and Paul Bunyan, 2–3

Earl of Harewood: on parody and pleasure in Albert Herring, 80

eccentricism: Adorno on, 15; in Between the Acts, 85; of Britten, 19, 25, 77–79, 194178, 194181; in Paul Bunyan, 2–3; and sincerity, 79; in The Turn of the Screw, 107

Eisler, Hanns: on Lulu (Berg), 116

Elgar, Edward, 6

Eliot, T. S., 14, 49, 115; on artistic timeliness, 65; on cultural and spiritual diversity, 124; on faith (as a corporate affair), 119; on high liturgy, 119–20; religious conviction of, 2041121; “Tradition and the Individual Talent,” 84; on war, 192114

Evans, John: on the “symphonic logic” in Death in Venice, 165

Evans, Nancy: on audience response to place names in Albert Herring, 68

Evans, Peter: on Britten’s post-Requiem music, 123; on motivic connections in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 144; on opera’s dramatic power, 164; on the purpose of Albert Herring, 86; on the structural depth of Death in Venice, 165

Falding, John: on the set of Death in Venice, 153

Faulkner, William: 3

fleshiness: in Death in Venice, 21157; in The Demon Lover, 88–89; in The Turn of the Screw, 89, 109

formalism: in opera, 163–71

Forster, E. M., 115; on Crabbe as a documentarist, 34

Franklin, Peter, 8; on modernism, 6

Freud, Sigmund: in interpretations of Albert Herring, 75; in interpretations of The Turn of the Screw, 104–6; sublimation, 208

gaudiness: in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 134, 145; in The Demon Lover, 88; in Der Rosenkavalier, 147; of opera (Adorno), 120; in The Turn of the Screw, 98 ghosts: in opera, 93; on stage, 94, talkative, 97–98; unintelligibility of (in The Turn of the Screw), 99–101. See also Turn of the Screw, The

Gilbert and Sullivan, 2; The Pirates of Penzance, 71; Trial by Jury, 69

Glock, William: on Britten’s eclecticism, 19; on the modernist rhetoric of realism in Peter Grimes, 60–61; on the strings in the prologue to Peter Grimes, 46

Goddard, Scott: on Peter Grimes (as “no child’s play”), 60

Goodwin, Noel: on Britten’s music as an “eloquent protest against intolerance and racial prejudice,” 133; on The Burning Fiery Furnace, 127, 129–30, 133

Gothic, the: film, 91–92, 113; novel, 90–91; stereotypes of, 94, 96fig., 97fig., 104; the visual in, 93–94

Graham, Colin: on The Burning Fiery Furnace’s asceticism, 126, 132; on The Burning Fiery

Index

Furnace’s “outgoing, fantastic and colorful” elements, 134; on Curlew River’s asceticism, 124; on the production of Death in Venice, 152–53

Gray, Cecil: on individuality in musical modernism, 77; on Sibelius’s work, 12 great divide, the, 6–8, 11–13, 16, 23, 28–29, 33, 64, 86, 150, 166, 171–75

Green, Kenneth, 35, 40

Greenberg, Clement, 6, 8, 11, 14; “Avant-Garde and Kitsch,” 171; on the “insidiousness” of middlebrow culture, 28; on middlebrows and modernist style, 15–16; on modernism’s own duplicity, 28; on The New Yorker (as “fundamentally high-class Kitsch for the luxury trade”), 14

Greenberg, Jonathan: on satire, 67

Greenfield, Edward: on Curlew River, 127; on the restraint of Death in Venice’s production, 153–54; on the sense of form in Death in Venice, 164; on the “theatrical” tone of the Babylonians in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 136

Grierson, John: on documentary films, 34; on realism, 37–38

Grotowski, Jerzy, 121

guilty pleasures, 3

Guthrie, Tyrone: on Britten’s inconsistent use of verismo and abstraction, 43

Hammer Horror movies, 91, 114

Hansen, Miriam: on modernism, 7

Hardy, Thomas, 50

Hart, Clive: on Dickensian sentimentality in Ulysses, 62

Henze, Hans Werner, 77, 174

Herbert, Christopher: on the connection between timeliness and words like “serious,” “tragic,” and “realistic,” 76

Heyworth, Peter: comparing Britten’s Death in Venice with Visconti’s film version, 156; on the “Games of Apollo” scene in Death in Venice, 160

highbrow(s), 1–5; 9–11; highbrow antipathy (Lord Elton), 69; and melodrama, 90

high liturgy, 118–20

Hindemith, Paul: as “the journalist of modern music, the supreme middlebrow of our times” (Lambert), 15, 19, 22

Hindley, Clifford: on scenes in Albert Herring speaking to the protagonist’s homosexuality, 76

Hitchcock, Alfred: The Man Who Knew Too Much, 92; Rebecca, 114

Holloway, Robin: on “artistic falsification” in Peter Grimes, 48; on the asceticism of The Burning Fiery Furnace, 129; on Britten’s connecting of avant-garde and tonality, 19; on priggishness and “drabbest stoicism” in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 125; on War Requiem, 123

Hollywood: as an alternative to opera for “unthinking” masses, 173; for Britten, 177n6; the state of Hollywood films (Macdonald), 11; Universal Horror films, 91–92

Hughes, Douglas: on The Demon Lover, 196n5

Hulme, T. E.: on modernist writing, 120

Humble, Nicola: on the middlebrow novel, 13

Humphrey, Edward: on Satie, 67

Huyssen, Andreas: on the “great divide,” 6–8, 29. See also great divide, the Hymnody, 122–23, 204n36, 205n40

Ingoldsby, Thomas, 92

IRCAM, 175

irony: modernist form of, 78

Isherwood, Christopher, 34, 41; “outspoken topicality” of, 65–66

Jacobs, Arthur, 153; on Britten’s operatic works, 152; on opera, 151–52

Jalliant, Lise, 28

James, Henry: The Spoils of Poynton, 69; The Turn of the Screw, 26, 89, 92–94, 102–4

jouissance: and opera, 167

journalism: Britten as “a brilliant journalist” (Lutyens), 19, 22; Britten on, 20–21; Hindemith as “the journalist of modern music” (Lambert), 15, 19, 22; and public opinion, 20

Joyce, James, 14, 49, 115; difficulty of (as a cloak for inner sentimentality [Scholes]), 62; Dubliners, 61; Ulysses, 61–62, 191n165

Kavka, Misha: on Hollywood’s Universal Horror films (and their British imitators), 91; on the visual in the Gothic, 93

Keller, Hans: on Britten’s popularity, 23; “cult of contemporaneity,” 77; on Grimes, 49–50; on the opening music of Albert Herring (as “intentionally idiotic”), 79; surface vs. depth in Albert Herring, 73–74
Kennedy, Michael: on Albert Herring, 64
Kenton, Edna, 104
Kerman, Joseph: Opera as Drama, 162–63; on Puccini and Strauss, 162–63; on sentimentality in Peter Grimes, 45
Keys to Opera (Howes and Hope-Wallace), 33
Kildea, Paul: on Albert Herring, 64, 76; on Britten and critics, 21; on Britten’s sensitivity to the modern music industry, 17; obscuring Britten’s contradictions, 22; on surface and depth in Britten’s music, 23
kitsch: vs. the avant-garde, 171; in Curlew River, 143; and (hypocritical) exaltation (Broch), 120; Messiaen’s Turangalîla-Symphonie as one of the prime musical examples of religious kitsch, 205; The New Yorker as “fundamentally high-class Kitsch for the luxury trade” (Greenberg), 14; religious, 122–23, 146
Lambert, Constant, 13, 25; on the BBC and a passive public, 14; on Hindemith, 15, 19; on the loss of “even the minor stimulus of genuine healthy vulgarity,” 11; on mass-mediated music, 10; on modernism and tradition, 85; “Official Revolution,” 77; on Schoenberg’s “bomb-throwing” and audience/composer relationship, 5–6, 77; on Schoenberg and critics, 28; on Sibelius’s music, 12
Leavis, F. R.: on defending a work from sentimentality, 49; on the highbrow, 4; on realism vs. sentimentality, 34; on timeliness and tradition, 86
Leavis, Q. D., 8; on critics, 21; Fiction and the Reading Public, 33; on the highbrow, 4; on irony in James’s work, 200n77; on James’s The Turn of the Screw, 103; on the middlebrow, 9–11; on novelists substituting boldness and familiarity for reality, 70; on timeliness and tradition, 86; on warrring psyches, 50
Lee, Rowland: Love from a Stranger, 92
Lepecki, André: on the body’s absence from Western choreography, 158
Lewis, Anthony: on the Benedicite in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 130
Lewis, Wyndham, 64
List, Kurt: on the use of Schoenbergian “mannerisms,” 15
Lockspeiser, Edward: on the final-act threnody in Albert Herring, 76; on the heroes of Britten’s operas, 74; on originality in Albert Herring, 82
Longobardi, Ruth Sara: on deep motivic significance in Death in Venice, 168
Lord Elton: on highbrow antipathy, 69
Lorenz, Alfred, 163
Loveland, Kenneth: on the “deeper” symbolism of Death in Venice, 154–55 lowbrow(s), in The Black Prince, 148; sentimentality as, 34
LPS: and opera (Adorno), 151
Lynes, Russell: on upper vs. lower middlebrows, 9
Macdonald, Dwight, 8, 11, 14; on “high” vs. “mass” culture, 4; on Hollywood movies, 11; on middlebrow “forgeries” and the dangers of “midcult,” 15
Mahler, Gustav: First Symphony, 113
Malipiero, Riccardo: on Britten’s illustrative music, 112
Mann, Thomas: Death in Venice, 148–49, 156–57, 159, 164
Mann, William: on Graham’s spare production of Death in Venice, 153
Mason, Colin: on the increasing asceticism in Britten’s music (around the time of Songs and Proverbs of William Blake, 123; on the unintelligibility of the ghosts in The Turn of the Screw, 99–100
Mass Observation movement, 34, 185n32
Maupassant, Guy de: “Le Rosier de Madame Husson,” 67–68, 70
Maw, Nicholas, 151
McClary, Susan: on the great divide and musicology, 6
McNaught, Susan: on the great divide and musicology, 6
McNaught, William: on Peter Grimes, 49
Mellers, Wilfrid: on the psychological reading of ghosts in The Turn of the Screw, 89, 105
melodrama, 98; and the Gothic tradition, 90–91; in The Turn of the Screw, 102
Messiaen, Olivier: Turangalîla-Symphonie, 205n43 middlebrow(s), 8–29; and the avant-garde, 15; and compromise, 11–12; and duplicity, 13–17, 19–20, 24, 29; as fraudsters (Woolf), 13; as hedgers (Woolf), 1; as “insidious” (Greenberg), 28; and mediocrity, 11; as “middlemen” (Q. D. Leavis), 9–10; as a moving target, 13; as “people who are hoping that some day they will get used to the stuff they ought to like” (Punch), 9, 14; as “transmuting the already-transmuted modernist ‘style’ into mere subject matter” (Greenberg), 15; as underhanded selling out of its own principles, 27; upper vs. lower (Lynes), 9

Middlemarch (Eliot), 71

Mila, Massimo: on Britten’s eclecticism, 19; on talkative ghosts in The Turn of the Screw, 98

Milnes, Rodney: on the “Games of Apollo” scene in Death in Venice, 157; on modern opera, 174

mimesis: in The Turn of the Screw, 109

Mitchell, Donald: on the aesthetic value of Albert Herring, 19; on Britten’s “eclecticism,” 194n78; on the culture shock of Peter Grimes, 31–32 modernism: as an aesthetic and ethical imperative (Franklin), 6; in Britten’s operas (Brett), 23; and comic optimism, 67; duplicity of, 28; as the epitome of Gothic melodrama, 115; as an honorific, 6–7; as a kind of cultural ambivalence (Cohen), 7, 29; as middlebrow, 29; in middlebrow media, 28; reverse, 4; sentimental (Clark), 62; and (highbrow) snobbery, 4–5; and tradition, 64, 77, 85

Mooneyham, Laura: comic optimism vs. modernism’s ascetic ideals, 67

Murdoch, Iris: The Black Prince, 147–48, 161; on the psychological in the novels of, 208n4; and selective reading, 150

nakedness: as considered for Death in Venice, 157–58. See also corporeality

Nether World (Gissing), 45

new, the, 11, 77; “make it new” (Pound) 64; Vaughan Williams’s “new-old” way of using common chords, 18

Newcombe, Suzanne: on yoga in late twentieth-century Britain, 203n15

Newman, Ernest: on Piper’s libretto for The Turn of the Screw, 106; on Schoenberg vs. Sibelius, 12; on Slater’s libretto for Peter Grimes, 43–44

New Yorker, The: as “fundamentally high-class Kitch for the luxury trade” (Greenberg), 14

Nicolson, Harold: and the “battle of the brows,” 4

Nietzsche, Friedrich: “mimomania,” 109, 201n11; on Wagner, 122

Nixon, Barbara: on realism, 34, 37

Noble, Jeremy: on the adoration of the Golden Image in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 139; on Aschenbach in Death in Venice, 155; on the Babylonian chorus vs. the Benedicite in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 133, 143; on The Burning Fiery Furnace vs. Curlew River, 134; on the density of thematic relationships in Death in Venice, 164; on “the new emphasis on austerity,” 123–24

Noh theater, 124, 136, 151–52

noise: music vs., 56–62, 145–46

Northanger Abbey (Austen), 68

Northcott, Bayan: on the “disaster” of the beach ballet in Death in Venice, 159; on the narrative priorities of Death in Venice, 155 nostalgia: in Albert Herring, 67–68, 73, 77, 86; in Between the Acts (Woolf), 64; and middlebrow mediocrity, 11–12; “nostalgia of place names” (Orwell), 68; in Noye’s Fludde, 205n40; poetry as an emblem of, 72; for a superstitious, medieval past, 90; in “Tradition and the Individual Talent” (Eliot), 84

opera, 23–25; “artist opera,” 155; “audience opera,” 155; as a bastion of elitism, 150; Boulez’s “unwritten,” 162, 212n79; as “bourgeois,” 172–73; as a cheap form of mass culture (Adorno), 171; as dead, 174; as decadent, 171; the gaudiness and exaggeration of (Adorno), 120; and ghosts, 93; and jouissance, 167; journeys in, 95–96; as the “last refuge of the high style” (Auden), 57; as a lightning rod for middlegrow duplicity (Boulez), 24; as a low (or the lowest) form of music/drama/art, 150, 163; the (flagrant) materiality of, 94, 151, 157; “modern opera,” 24; as obscene (in the twentieth century), 172; as offering a less abstemious form of modernism, 174; about opera (meta-opera), 155; “philosophical opera,” 155; as prefiguring some of the worst abominations of the culture industry, 150; as the quintessentially middlegrow genre, 174; as ruining the audience for genuine modern music, 174; as too realistic and not realistic enough (Jacobs), 151; as a tourist attraction, 31

orgasm: musical, 147, 167, 212n72

Orwell, George: aestheticization of dirt, 45, 62; on Dickensian “realism” as a form of “middle-class sentimentality,” 41, 62; “nostalgia of place names” (Orwell), 68; on novelist and major public events of the moment, 65; as a sentimentalist, 187n68; on Ulysses, 191n165

Parker, Roger: on emotional restraint written into stage directions, 190n148; on the similar sentimental effects of the collapse into silence and speech, 59 passivity: in public listening (Lambert), 14
pastiche: in Albert Herring, 78–80; in Between the Acts, 63, 85
Paul Bunyan, 1–4, 25
Pears, Peter: on Crabbe’s “amazing powers of observation,” 34; on Grimes as “an ordinary weak person,” 49; as an unbelievable ghost (Shawe-Taylor), 98
Perrin, Tom: on middlebrow novels, 13
Pestalozza, Luigi: on Crabbe’s “amazing powers of observation,” 34; on Grimes as “an ordinary weak person,” 49; as an unbelievable ghost (Shawe-Taylor), 98
Peters, John: on the Gothic resurgence, 90
Picasso, Pablo, 14
Piper, John: on the country house setting of Albert Herring, 68–69; and the Gothic imagery in The Turn of the Screw, 94; and the set of Death in Venice, 153
Piper, Myfanwy: on the handling of the “Games of Apollo” in Death in Venice, 157; and the handling of ghosts in The Turn of the Screw, 97, 102–4; and the origin of The Turn of the Screw, 92–94
Plomer, William, 117; on The Burning Fiery Furnace (vs. Curlew River), 134
Poore, Charles: on the Gothic resurgence, 90
Porter, Andrew: on Death in Venice as a “moral fable,” 156; on the “Games of Apollo” scene in Death in Venice, 159–60; on motivic use in Death in Venice, 164–65; on the orchestration in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 134; on the simplicity of the Benedicite in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 131
Pound, Ezra: “make it new,” 64
pragmatism: in Paul Bunyan, 2
Priestley, J. B., 13, 25; and the “battle of the brows,” 4; on the “broadbrow,” 11, 14, 19; embracing the middlebrow, 11
Prokofiev, Sergei: Peter and the Wolf, 112; as “rib-nudger,” 79
Puccini, Giacomo, 51: as collateral damage (in Kerman’s fight to keep opera alive), 163; and repetition (Kerman), 162; as sentimental benchmark of opera criticism, 33; the “square tunes of” (Britten), 18; Turandot, 162
Puchner, Martin: on modern anti-theatricalism, 151 purity: aesthetic, 2, 14–15, 27–28; musical, 107–8; pure theater, 161
Radcliffe, Ann, 90; Mysteries of Udolpho, 114
Radway, Janice: on book-club readers and modernist alienation, cynicism, and despair, 13
Rayment, Malcolm: on the “interminable,” “embarrassing” beach ballet in Death in Venice, 159 realism: operatic, 35, 51, 57, 152; in Peter Grimes, 33–34, 55–56; as a revolutionary act (Slater), 34
Reed, Philip: on Britten’s compositional style, 57
Reith, John: on the responsibilities of the BBC, 9–11, 14
repentation: of cheap thrills and culinary moments, 162; in Puccini (Kerman), 162
Richards, I. A.: on sentimentality, 32–33, 45
Robert-Blunn, John: comparing Britten’s Death in Venice with Mann’s original, 156; on the intellectualism of Death in Venice, 155; on the reception of Death in Venice, 148–49
Robinson, John (Bishop of Woolwich): on the church as a community of equals, 119
Rorem, Ned: on the “miscalculation” of making flesh of the ineffable, 21157; on the “Silent Ideal” being depicted in opera through mime, 154
Rubin, Joan: The Making of Middlebrow Culture, 13
Rupprecht, Philip: on Death in Venice, 165; on the function of the “screw” theme, 108
Sackville-West, Vita, 4; on A Ceremony of Carols’eschewal of sentimentality and aestheticism, 122
Sadie, Stanley: on Britten’s operatic works, 152; Opera: A Modern Guide, 151
Sadler’s Wells, 30–31, 35, 37; as thriving on a form of middle-class voyeurism (Dent), 41
Savran, David: on the middlebrow, 27
Scarborough, Dorothy: on the Gothic roots of the supernatural in nineteenth-century literature, 90
Schoenberg, Arnold, 12, 77, 174; for Britten, 17: contradictions of, 28; and critics, 20, 28; on “genuine” modernists, 5; Moses und Aron, 126, 139, 175
Scholes, Robert: on Joyce’s difficulty, 62
Schubert, Franz: death lullabies, 113
Schwartz, Arman: the realist “fiction of authorial abdication,” 57; on “self-justifying performances,” 51
Sear, Harold: on Peter Grimes’s operatic realism, 35
Seidel, Michael: on the satirical impulse and conventions, 73 sensuality: in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 125, 145; in Death in Venice, 156–57; lowbrow, 120; in opera, 120; in Puccini and Strauss (for Kerman), 162; and religion, 118–20; in Wagner, 122 sentimentality, 5; and excess, 32; vs. realism, 34, 40–45; rejection of, 61; sentimental modernism (Clark), 62
serialism: in Death in Venice, 165; in The Turn of the Screw, 107
Seymour, Claire: on surface and depth in Britten’s music, 23, 168
Shakespeare, William, 65; and popularity/prestige, 5
Shaw-Taylor, Desmond: on The Burning Fiery Furnace, 127–28, 135–36, 139; on character treatment in Peter Grimes, 48; on Crabbe’s realism, 35; on the final-act threnody in Albert Herring, 76; on Pears as an unbelievable ghost, 98; on style-borrowing in Albert Herring, 78; on The Turn of the Screw, 103
Sheppard, Anthony: on modern dramaturgy’s appropriation of postures and austerity from the East, 124; on nostalgia in Noye’s Fludde, 205n40
Shostakovich, Dmitri, 15; Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District, 48, 102; as “rib-nudger,” 79
Sibelius, Jean, 15; opinions on the music of, 12 silence: in The Demon Lover, 88; in James’s The Turn of the Screw, 103; in Merrily on High, 117; as recognition and appreciation (Brook), 121, 129; and speech, 59; “terrifying” (in Peter Grimes), 56 simplicity: in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 126–32, 144–45
Singer, Ben: on happy endings and sentimental melodramas, 40
Slater, Montagu, 40–41, 44; philosophizing of, 43; poetic style of, 42; on realism, 34; sentimentality in Peter Grimes, 45
Smart, Mary Ann: and the term “mimomanic,” 201n111 snobbery, 4, 9, 18, 27, 150, 172
speech: the “almost spoken,” 170; vs. melody, 55–59; vs. silence, 59
Stadlen, Peter: on the Benedicite in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 131; on The Burning Fiery Furnace as a Meistersinger to Carlew River’s Tristan, 134; on the “coloristic invention” of the adoration of the Golden Image in The Burning Fiery Furnace, 139; on the “lean, ascetic style” of The Burning Fiery Furnace, 129, 131
Stein, Erwin: on ghosts in operas, 93 Stephenson, Colin: Merrily on High, 117–18
stoicism: Britten’s, 126; and the pub, 45
Stravinsky, Igor: on duplicity and ambivalence in Britten, 27; The Rake’s Progress, 102; on reception to War Requiem, 21; Symphony of Psalms, 122; on War Requiem (as a form of religious kitsch), 123, 205n43
Strauss, Richard: Ariadne auf Naxos, 155; Capriccio, 155; as collateral damage (in Kerman’s fight to keep opera alive), 163; Der Rosenkavalier, 51, 77, 147, 150; and sensual immediacy and physicality (Kerman), 162
Stuart, Charles: on Britten and eclecticism, 19, 77, 194n81; on reading Freud between the lines of Albert Herring, 75 subjectivity: erasure of, 57
sublimation, 26
Summers, Montague: Gothic Quest, 90 surface vs. depth, 23, 38, 74, 76, 154, 165, 171 suspense: as the essence of modern harmony, 116 sympathy, 45–50
Taruskin, Richard, 8; on the challenges that Britten’s operas pose, 172; on the “opera problem,” 171; on traditional musicological indifference to matters of mediation and reception, 20
Thomson, Virgil: on Paul Bunyan, 1–3; on Sibelius’s symphonies, 12; on the singing ghosts in The Turn of the Screw, 102; on The Turn of the Screw’s set design, 94
timeliness: artistic, 65–66; vs. tradition, 73, 86–87; and tragic elements, 76
Timperley, Rosemary, 90
Tracey, Daniel, 28
tradition: and Albert Herring, 67–68, 80, 86–87; anti-traditionalism, 78, 86; cultural, 63; and modernism, 64, 77, 85; and originality, 85; vs. timeliness, 73, 86–87
Tranchell, Peter: on Britten studies, 22
Turn of the Screw, The, 26, 89–116, 144, 163; morbidity of, 93; as “most suitable for television,” 112; unity in, 107
unintelligibility: of the ghosts in The Turn of the Screw, 99–101

Upward, Edward: on the advantages of realism, 34

Vaughan Williams, Ralph, 6, 18

Varma, Devendra: Gothic Flame, 90

Verdi, Giuseppe, 50

Visconti, Luchino: Death in Venice (film), 156, 164

vomit: as a metaphor for sexual release, 147

voyeurism, 45: as a pretext for aesthetic reflection, 158; and realism, 41

Wagner, Richard: Parsifal, 122, 126, 201111; “permanent melody,” 51

Walpole, Horace, 90, 92; Castle of Otranto, 114

Walsh, Stephen: on Aschenbach in Death in Venice, 155

Walton, William, 6

Warrack, John: on The Burning Fiery Furnace, 134, 144

Waugh, Evelyn, 119; Brideshead Revisited, 68

Webern, Anton, 62

Weill, Kurt, 5

Whistler, Laurence, 90

Whitaker, Philip: on Peter Grimes, 30–31, 33, 50

Widdemer, Margaret: on middlebrows, 9

Widdicombe, Gillian: on Death in Venice, 164

Wiebe, Heather: on Britten’s early choral works, 122; on “compromised” opera commissions, 174; on War Requiem, 123

Wilde, Oscar, 119

Williams, Stephen: on Britten’s exposure/success, 17

Williamson, Malcolm, 152

Wilson, Conrad: on an opera without an author as its hero, 155

Wilson, Edmond: “The Ambiguity of Henry James,” 103; on surface and depth in The Turn of the Screw, 104; on the timeliness of Peter Grimes, 30, 66;

Wodehouse, P. G., 67; Carry On, Jeeves, 74

Woolf, Virginia, 72: on Auden and Isherwood, 41; on the BBC, 9; Between the Acts, 63–65, 67, 69–70, 85–86; on the “brows,” 1–2; contradictions of (re: the middlebrow), 28; discomfort with reading literature, 65; on the ghosts of Henry James, 115; on the Gothic tradition, 90–91, 115; on highbrows, 9; on middlebrow(s), 8, 10–12, 13–14; Mrs. Dalloway, 74, 115; on past literature, 64–65; on “realistic poetry,” 43; To the Lighthouse, 115; and tradition, 68, 86

Yeats, W. B., 115; “The Second Coming,” 101

yoga: 124, 132, 203115
Situated at the intersections of twentieth-century music history, historiography, and aesthetics, Middlebrow Modernism uses Benjamin Britten’s operas to illustrate the ways in which composers, critics, and audiences mediated the “great divide” between modernism and mass culture. Reviving mid-century discussions of the middlebrow, Christopher Chowrimootoo demonstrates how Britten’s works allowed audiences to have their modernist cake and eat it: to revel in the pleasures of consonance, lyricism, and theatrical spectacle even while enjoying the prestige that came from rejecting them. By focusing on moments when reigning aesthetic oppositions and hierarchies threatened to collapse, this study offers a powerful model for recovering shades of grey in the traditionally black-and-white historiographies of twentieth-century music.

“Christopher Chowrimootoo’s exhaustively researched and elegantly written study deftly charts a course to the ambivalent heart of postwar modernism. He invites us to listen anew, offering provocative reinterpretations not just of Britten’s operas, but of a range of figures from Sibelius to Boulez.” ARMAN SCHWARTZ, author of Puccini’s Soundscapes

“Ranging widely across literary, theatrical, musical, and religious debates, Christopher Chowrimootoo traces how modernist values were negotiated in everyday critical practice. In the process, he offers sophisticated and compelling new readings of Britten’s operas, showing us how they register twentieth-century art’s paradoxical position in a market-driven society.” HEATHER WIEBE, author of Britten’s Unquiet Pasts

“In a virtuoso deconstruction, Chowrimootoo shows that middlebrow modernism is anything but peripheral. At the same time, this middlebrow center gets teased apart, becoming anything but middle. All the while, the swift prose is a pleasure, the intelligence crackling, the capacious readings of Britten’s operas indispensable.” SETH BRODSKY, author of From 1989, or European Music and the Modernist Unconscious

CHRISTOPHER CHOWRIMOOTOO is Assistant Professor in the Program of Liberal Studies and in the Department of Music at the University of Notre Dame.