“Gould has written an important volume about a key figure in a movement which, if we are to survive as a civilized people, must become a dominant theme in American life.”

Western Historical Quarterly

“Gould’s impressive scholarship has resulted in a book that gives recognition to an energetic first lady, who, like a contingent of women before her, knew that clean-up efforts built better communities.”

Journal of Southern History

“Impressive scholarship . . . . Environmental historians will welcome the study, especially as it sheds light on the development of environmental consciousness in the 1960s, readers interested in the presidency will appreciate the detailed treatment given a first lady, and the many general readers will enjoy the insights Gould brings to understanding Lady Bird Johnson herself.”

Martin V. Melosi, author of The Sanitary City: Environmental Services in Urban America from Colonial Times to the Present

“This volume secures the place of Lady Bird Johnson as a catalyst of the modern environmental movement . . . [for] students of the environmental movement, women’s history, and presidential politics.”

Polly Welts Kaufman, author of National Parks and the Woman’s Voice: A History

“Lady Bird Johnson did more than plant flowers in public places. She served the country superbly by planting environmental values in the minds of the nation’s leaders and citizens. Gould’s perceptive book explains in rich detail how she accomplished this.”

Stewart L. Udall, secretary of the interior under Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson

Lewis L. Gould is Eugene C. Barker Centennial Professor Emeritus in American History at the University of Texas at Austin. He is the author of twenty books, including Four Hats in the Ring: The 1912 Election and the Birth of Modern American Politics and The Presidency of Theodore Roosevelt, Second Edition, Revised and Expanded, both from Kansas.
