The Truman White House brings together twenty-two key associates of President Truman's to consider the administrative operation of the presidency from 1945 to 1953. A record of the discussions that took place at the conference held in May 1977 sponsored by the Harry S. Truman Library Institute for National and International Affairs, it presents an assortment of views on Truman's administrative philosophies and practices. Sharing personal reflections are, among others, Charles Brannan, W. Averell Harriman, Leon H. Keyserling, Charles S. Murphy, Richard E. Neustadt, John W. Snyder, Elmer B. Staats, and Tom C. Clark.

“The insights and hind sights regarding such critical offices as the Council of Economic Advisers, the Bureau of the Budget, and the National Security Council provide much food for thought for not only students of the Truman presidency, but for those concerned with contemporary workings of the administrative presidency.” — Presidential Studies Quarterly

“One senses a White House that was as different from what preceded it as from what followed it, but one that nonetheless had a determining effect on what the presidency has become.” — Political Science Quarterly

“Such a conference and its record are a valuable supplement to the static research materials housed at the presidential libraries.” — American Political Science Review
