This volume convincingly explains how capitalism has caused the climate crisis and why it cannot solve the crisis ... Its democratic eco-socialist vision is rational, absolutely necessary and urgent as a basis to sustain life.
— Mazibuko Jara, activist and director of Ntinga Ntaba kaNdoda

This volume reminds us that fossil fuel corporations, petro-states and ruling elites are the key forces deepening the climate crisis. Hurricanes like Harvey and Irma have once again demonstrated the ways that extreme weather events disproportionately impact working people, the poor and black lives.
— Naomi Klein, author of No Is Not Enough and This Changes Everything

South Africa’s National Development Plan supports resource nationalism, particularly more coal mines. Together with our carbon-intensive economy, addiction to fossil fuels and nuclear energy, South Africa and the world are heading down the wrong path. Our recent drought is a window into the future ... This volume should be read by all concerned about a climate-driven world.
— Makoma Lekalakala, climate justice activist and director of Earthlife Africa, Johannesburg

Volume three in the Democratic Marxism series, The Climate Crisis investigates emerging eco-socialist alternatives to our current capital-driven, ecocidal path. It presents the thinking of leading climate justice activists, campaigners and social movements advancing systemic alternatives and developing bottom-up, just transitions to sustain life. Through a combination of theoretical and empirical work, the authors collectively examine the challenges and opportunities inherent in the current moment.

This volume places ecological issues at the centre of democratic Marxism. Most importantly, it extends our understanding of historical socialism to include democratic eco-socialism in order to meet current challenges in South Africa and the world.
