I timed my arrival to make an X.
At the intersection you were on the other side.
I smiled like the city bus between us.
A sick, fluorescent smile.
In that moment my coat blew open:
half-slip hiked around my waist, my hair I hoped a wave of grain. This is not a weekend feeling.
I am holding my heart against my chest.
In the city of history I am still happening.
Goddamn-motherfucking-son-of-a-Bitch!
