Towards the Ethics of Form in Fiction

Toker, Leona

Published by The Ohio State University Press

Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/27743.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/27743

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=1145040
CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction Remissions/Reprieves 1

Chapter One Carnival and Crisis in Three Stories by Nathaniel Hawthorne 21

Chapter Two Oppositionality in Fielding’s Tom Jones 35

Chapter Three Carnival Diminished: The Secret Springs of Tristram Shandy 49

Chapter Four Non-Carnivalesque Oppositionality: Jane Austen and the Golden Mean 67

Chapter Five Checks and Balances: Charles Dickens’s A Tale of Two Cities 94

Chapter Six Across the Boundaries of Self: George Eliot’s Daniel Deronda 116

Chapter Seven Carnival Reversals: Thomas Hardy’s The Mayor of Casterbridge 131

Chapter Eight Morphology of the Test: Non-Contact Measurement of Self in Conrad’s “The Secret Sharer” 143

Chapter Nine Carnivalization: Throwaways in Joyce’s Ulysses 157

Break, Pause Caesura 175

Varlam Shalamov “The Artist of the Spade,” trans. N. Strazhas 179

Chapter Ten Discourse of Lent: Kafka’s “A Hunger Artist” and Shalamov’s “The Artist of the Spade” 191

Concluding Remarks 202

Works Cited 211

Index 231