Deciphering Race

Callanan, Laura

Published by The Ohio State University Press

Callanan, Laura.
Deciphering Race: White Anxiety, Racial Conflict, and the Turn to Fiction in Mid-Victorian English Prose.

The Ohio State University Press, 2005.
Project MUSE. muse.jhu.edu/book/28262.

For additional information about this book
https://muse.jhu.edu/book/28262

For content related to this chapter
https://muse.jhu.edu/related_content?type=book&id=1149477
CONTENTS

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS vii

INTRODUCTION: Aestheticizing Mid-Victorian Racial Tropism 1

CHAPTER 1: Toussaint and the Staging of Political Aesthetics in Harriet Martineau's The Hour and the Man (1841) 21

CHAPTER 2: “Life Clothed in Forms”: Radical Racism as Formalist Aesthetic in Robert Knox's The Races of Men (1850) 44

CHAPTER 3: The Dialectic of Scapegoat and Fetish: Failed Catharsis in Charles Dickens and Wilkie Collins’s “The Perils of Certain English Prisoners” (1857) 76

CHAPTER 4: “So Help Me God, the Truth and Not the Truth”: Hyper-Realism and the Taxonomy of Truth Seeking in the Royal Commission's Inquiry into the 1865 Jamaica Rebellion 96

CHAPTER 5: Race, Ruins, and Rebellion: Spatializing Racial Otherness in James Grant's First Love and Last Love (1868) 122

CONCLUSION: De-Aestheticizing Sara(h) Ba(a)rtman(n) 142

NOTES 159

BIBLIOGRAPHY 173

INDEX 181