This series focuses on the history of women and health, but also includes studies that address gender and masculinity. Works in the series examine the history of sickness, health, and healing in relation to health workers, activists, and patients. They also explore the ways in which issues of gender, race, ethnicity, and health have reflected and shaped beliefs, values, and power dynamics in society.
Mothers and Motherhood: Readings in American History
Edited by Rima D. Apple and Janet Golden

Making Midwives Legal: Childbirth, Medicine, and the Law
Raymond G. DeVries

Listen to Me Good: The Story of an Alabama Midwife
Margaret Charles Smith and Linda Janet Holmes

Women and Prenatal Testing: Facing the Challenges of Genetic Technology
Edited by Karen H. Rothenberg and Elizabeth J. Thomson

And Sin No More: Social Policy and Unwed Mothers in Cleveland, 1855–1990
Marian J. Morton

The Selling of Contraception: The Dalkon Shield Case, Sexuality, and Women's Autonomy
Nicole J. Grant